Noblit,2018-03-09 Education research has seen a phenomenal growth in studies that explore the multiple fluid and changing complexities of culture and identity work The nuanced contradictory and process oriented nature of identity and identification has meant that the studies in education are largely and appropriately qualitative and ethnographic However because qualitative studies are marked by their focus on the particular it has been difficult to discern exactly what these studies contribute to identity theory collectively In Cultural Constructions of Identity a set of meta ethnographic syntheses of qualitative studies addressing identity become the vehicle to speak across single studies to address cultural identity theory Meta Ethnography first developed by Noblit and Hare in 1988 incorporates a translation theory of interpretation so that the unique aspects of studies are preserved to the degree possible while also revealing the analogies between these studies While the studies in this book examine the various intersections of race and ethnicity with respect to gender age class and sexuality Cultural Constructions of Identity turns its primary focus on what these studies reveal about identity and identification theory itself Contesting the Middle Ages John Aberth,2018-10-03 Contesting the Middle Ages is a thorough exploration of recent arguments surrounding nine hotly debated topics the decline and fall of Rome the Viking invasions the Crusades the persecution of minorities sexuality in the Middle Ages women within medieval society intellectual and environmental history the Black Death and lastly the waning of the Middle Ages The historiography of the Middle Ages a term in itself controversial amongst medieval historians has been continuously debated and rewritten for centuries In each chapter John Aberth sets out key historiographical debates in an engaging and informative way encouraging students to consider the process of writing about history and prompting them to ask questions even of already thoroughly debated subjects such as why the Roman Empire fell or what significance the Black Death had both in the late Middle Ages and beyond Sparking discussion and inspiring examination of the past and its ongoing significance in modern life Contesting the Middle Ages is essential reading for the use of risk assessment in sentencing actuarial methods are being used more than ever to determine whom law enforcement officials target and punish And with the exception of racial profiling on our highways and streets most people favor these methods because they believe they re a more cost effective way to fight crime In Against Prediction Bernard E Harcourt challenges this growing reliance on actuarial methods These prediction tools he demonstrates may in fact increase the overall amount of crime in society depending on the relative responsiveness of the profiled populations to heightened security They may also aggravate the difficulties that minorities already have obtaining work education and a better quality of life thus perpetuating the pattern of criminal behavior Ultimately Harcourt shows how the perceived success of actuarial methods has begun to distort our very conception of just punishment and to obscure alternate visions of social order In place of the actuarial he proposes instead a turn to randomization in punishment and policing The presumption Harcourt concludes should be against prediction All My Relations: Understanding the Experiences of Native Americans with
