It is important to explore the physiological mechanisms and regulatory measures in response to abiotic stresses. The interactions between crop and environmental stresses are multistep and complex. The stress resistance response of maize is still an extremely complicated process. Studies on responses of maize growth yield or quality under stress conditions are growing exponentially but the description at a physiological or biochemical level is still unclear. In addition, new knowledge of maize hybrids with adversity resistance has not been deeply excavated. Hence, it is necessary to capture current knowledge on the impact of abiotic stress on maize, especially the mechanisms and regulation of maize responses under multiple stresses and to provide potential solutions that will ensure a sustainable supply of nutritious food to meet the demand from an increasing population under a changing climate.

Integrated nutrients management: An approach for sustainable crop production and food security in changing climates Amanullah, Gabrijel Ondrasek, Abdel Rahman Mohmmad Said Al-Tawaha, 2024-06-20. Soil health and fertility are continuously declining due to the removal of essential plant nutrients from the soils in the current changing climate scenario. Due to less soil organic carbon (SOC) and growing of high yielding varieties and hybrids, further increases deficiencies of both macro and micronutrients that had a negative impact on soil health, crop productivity, food security and growers. Integrated nutrients management not only increases crop productivity and growers income but also increases soil fertility, health and sustainability in changing climates. Integrated nutrients management (INM) refers to the maintenance of soil fertility and improvement in crop productivity with the application of plant nutrients through the combined application of organic fertilizers, animal manures and plant residues, chemical fertilizers, urea, SSP, DAP, etc. and bio fertilizers, beneficial microbes.

Environmental Effects Xudong Peng, Narsimha Adimalla, Zisheng Xing, Qiang Li, 2025-09-23. Soil erosion and water loss pose two serious challenges to the global ecological environment today. Every 5 seconds an area of soil equivalent to a football field is eroded on Earth, whereas it takes up to 1000 years to form just 2-3 cm of soil on the Earth's surface. These issues are the result of various natural factors, but human activities and related land use change are the primary drivers of accelerated soil erosion and water loss. This acceleration has far reaching consequences including farmland degradation, water sources pollution and ecosystem imbalance as well as threats to the sustainability of agriculture, efficient water resource utilization and global climate stability. In the 21st century, soil and water are essential resources for meeting human needs such as food feed fiber clean water and clean air They are fundamental components of ecosystems and vital for the proper functioning of Earth s systems supporting the delivery of primary ecosystem services However they have become increasingly degraded on a global scale due to climate change and human activities It is an urgent priority to understand the processes of soil erosion and water loss and their environmental effects In response to these challenges studying the underlying mechanisms long term impacts and management approaches for addressing soil and water resource loss has become a crucial issue to be tackled
