Grahame Clark, 1989-08-25 Grahame Clark s book examines the development of prehistoric archaeology at Cambridge and the achievements of its graduates placing this theme against the background of the growth of archaeology as an academic discipline worldwide Prehistory in Cambridge began to be taught formally in 1920 and emerged as a full tripos soon after the Second World War From the outset it focused on the aims and methods of archaeological research providing in addition for combinations of study options ranging from early prehistory to the archaeology of the major civilisations of the Old World and the protohistory of Northern Europe The measure of its success is shown by the achievement of Cambridge graduates at home and overseas in both the study and the field A significant outcome of their work has been the widespread recognition of archaeology as a subject of broad educational value not merely for undergraduates but for human beings the world over

European Prehistory Sarunas Milisauskas, 2012-12-06 Sarunas Milisauskas 1 1 INTRODUCTION The purpose of this book is four fold to introduce English speaking students and scholars to some of the outstanding archaeological research that has been done in Europe in recent years to integrate this research into an anthropological frame of reference to address episodes of culture change such as the transition to farming the origin of complex societies and the origin of urbanism and to provide an overview of European prehistory from the earliest appearance of humans to the rise of the Roman empire In 1978 the Academic Press published my book European Prehistory which typically for that period emphasized cultural evolution culture process technology environment and economy To produce a new version and an up to date prehistory of Europe I have invited contributions from specialists in the Palaeolithic Mesolithic Bronze and Iron Ages Thus while this version of European Prehistory is a new book however it still incorporates some data from the 1978 version particularly in The Present Environment and Neolithic chapters Like its predecessor this edition is structured around selected general topics such as technology trade settlement warfare and ritual Interpreting the Landscape Michael Aston, 2002-09-11 Most places in Britain have had a local history written about them Up until this century these histories have addressed more parochial issues such as the life of the manor rather than explaining the features and changes in the landscape in a factual manner Much of what is visible today in Britain s landscape is the result of a chain of social and natural processes and can be interpreted through fieldwork as well as from old maps and documents Michael Aston uses a wide range of source material to study the complex and dynamic history of the countryside illustrating his points with aerial photographs maps plans and charts He shows how to understand the surviving remains as well as offering his own explanations for how our landscape has evolved

The Oxford Handbook of Wetland Archaeology Francesco Menotti, Aidan O'Sullivan, 2013 This Handbook sets out the key issues and debates in the theory and practice of wetland archaeology which has played a crucial role in studies of our past Due to the high quantity of preserved organic materials found in humid environments the study of wetlands has allowed archaeologists to reconstruct people s everyday lives in great detail

Living on the Lake in Prehistoric Europe Francesco Menotti, 2004-08-19 The chance discovery in 1854 of a prehistoric lake village on Lake Zurich triggered what we now call the lake dwelling phenomenon One hundred and fifty years of research and animated academic disputes have transformed the phenomenon into one of the most reliable sources of information in wetland archaeology This definitive volume provides an overview of the development of lake village studies explores the impact of a range of scientific techniques on the settlements and considers how the public can relate to this evocative and exciting branch of archaeology It explains how the multidisciplinary research context has significantly improved our knowledge of prehistoric wetland communities from an environmental as well as a cultural perspective

The Archaeological and Forensic Applications of Microfossils: A Deeper Understanding of Human History The Archaeological and Forensic Applications of Microfossils M. Williams, T. Hill, I. Boomer, I.P. Wilkinson, 2017-06-16 Microfossils are an abundant component of the sedimentary rock record Their analysis can reveal not only the environments in which the rocks were deposited but also their age When combined the spatial and temporal distribution patterns of microfossils offer enormous utility for archaeological and forensic investigations Their presence can act as a geological fingerprint and the tiniest fragment of material such as a broken Iron Age potsherd can contain a microfossil signature that reveals the geographical source of the materials under investigation This book explores how microfossils are employed as tools to interpret human society and habitation throughout history Examples include microfossil evidence associated with Palaeolithic human occupation at Boxgrove in Sussex alongside investigations into human induced landscape change during the Holocene Further examples include the use of microfossils to provenance the source materials of Iron Age ceramics Roman mosaics and Minoan pottery in addition to their application to help solve modern murder cases highlighting the diverse applications of microfossils to improving our understanding of human history

Tropical Archaeobotany Jon G. Hather, 2013-10-28 Tropical Archaeobotany fills the need for a substantial reference work on plant remains from the tropics It covers the examination identification and interpretation of plant remains in tropical archaeology whilst also the origins spread investigating the origins spread distribution and past use of tropical plants for food and other purposes Recent technological developments in electron microscopy and biochemical and genetic research as well as increased interest in tropical environments and ecosystems are now beginning to realise the great potential for archaeobotanical research in the tropics With the use of case studies from a wide range of areas this volume details the latest macroscopic microscopic and chemical techniques for the analysis of plant remains from seeds roots and tubers to epidermal fragments pollen and phytoliths Each chapter of Tropical Archaeobotany focuses on a different aspect of archaeobotanical research using detailed examples from a variety of tropical areas though with its emphasis on techniques and methodology the book has a relevance beyond the regional scope of each chapter

The Birth of Neolithic Britain Julian Thomas, 2013-11-28 The beginning of the Neolithic in Britain is a topic of perennial interest in archaeology marking the end of a hunter gatherer way of life with the introduction of domesticated plants and animals pottery polished stone tools and a range of new kinds of monuments including earthen long barrows and megalithic tombs Every year numerous new articles are published on different aspects of the topic ranging from diet and subsistence economy to population movement architecture and seafaring Thomas offers a treatment that synthesizes all of this material presenting a coherent argument to explain the process of transition between the Mesolithic Neolithic periods Necessarily the developments in Britain are put into the context of broader debates about the origins of agriculture in Europe and the diversity of processes of change in different parts of the continent are explored These are followed by a historiographic treatment of debates on the transition in Britain Chapters cover the Mesolithic background processes of contact and interaction monumental architecture and timber halls portable artefacts and plants and animals The concluding argument is that developments in the economy and material culture must be understood as being related to fundamental social transformations Woodland in the Neolithic of Northern Europe Gordon Noble, 2017-02-15 The Neolithic period is one of the great transformations in human history when agriculture first began and dramatic changes occurred in human society. These changes occurred in environments that were radically different to those that exist today and in northern Europe many landscapes would have been dominated by woodland. Yet wood and woodland rarely figures in the minds of many archaeologists and it plays no part in the traditional Three Age system that has defined the frameworks of European prehistory. This book explores how human environment relations altered with the beginnings of farming and how the Neolithic in northern Europe was made possible through new ways of living in and understanding the environment. Drawing on a broad range of evidence from pollen data and stone axes to the remains of timber monuments and settlements, the book analyzes the relationship between people, their material culture and their woodland environment. Ancient Monuments in the Countryside Timothy Darvill, 2014-02-15 Much of England's rich archaeological heritage lies in the countryside. Many monuments such as barrows, hillforts and Roman villas are familiar features of the landscape, while other sites lie buried or only partly visible. These remains are the result of the impact on the landscape of the countless generations of people who have lived, worked and died within it. The cumulative effect is the landscape we know today in which the historical dimension is an integral component of the valued whole and an important part of what most people in England are increasingly concerned to see protected and conserved. The archaeological heritage, however, is a finite and fragile resource and much of it has been lost in the last two decades as a result of increasing pressures on farming, industry and commerce to maximise the return on investment in the land. The conservation of what remains therefore needs to be given urgent consideration. This report has three main goals. First, it aims to present the background to the recognition, investigation and management of the archaeological resource. Second, it attempts to review what is known of the resource, the threats currently posed to it and the ways in which it can be exploited and conserved. Finally, it looks towards the development and promotion of a secure future for ancient monuments in the countryside. Rivers in Prehistory Andrea Vianello, 2015-08-31 From antiquity onwards, people have opted to live near rivers and major watercourses. This volume explores rivers as facilitators of movement through landscapes and investigates the reasons for living near a river as well as the role of the river in the human landscape.

Palynology and Vegetation History Valentí Rull, Encarni Montoya, Thomas Giesecke, Jesse L. Morris, 2019-01-11 This Research Topic commemorates the centenary of the first quantitative pollen diagram by Lennart von Post, the founder of paleoecological palynology. The main aim is to provide a thorough view of the use of palynology in aspects such as the reconstruction of Quaternary vegetation and environmental changes, the role of natural and anthropogenic drivers in the development of the Quaternary vegetation, the shaping of present-day ecological and biogeographical patterns, the potential application of this knowledge in biodiversity conservation and landscape restoration, and the development of new methods of pollen analysis and data management. The Research Topic is subdivided into four main conceptual parts, namely: 1. modern analog studies 2 land cover estimates from pollen data 3 vegetation dynamics reconstructions from Europe North and South America Africa and Oceania and 4 large scale reviews and meta analyses Hopefully this Research Topic will serve to appraise the state of the art of modern palynology and highlight the usefulness of this discipline in long term ecological research

Prehistoric Britain Timothy Darvill, 2010-07-02 Prehistoric Britain now in its second edition examines the development of human societies in Britain from earliest times to the Roman conquest of AD 43 as revealed by archaeological evidence Special attention is given to six themes which are traced through prehistory subsistence technology ritual trade society and population
