

Safety: Level 1

Safety: Level 1 course! Before you start, please take a minute to understand how this course works and how to obtain your certificate at the end.

The course consists of 10 modules, the last of which is a quiz in which you must achieve a score of 80% or more to pass. You can access the course menu, or you can navigate through them in order by using the buttons at the bottom of the page.

To complete the course, you need to access all information and interactions by clicking all available buttons. Once you have access to the Module 10: Quiz to be granted. Each module has its own progress indicator in the upper-right that displays which components you need to complete, so you'll know what you need to do next.

For more information, there is a glossary section that is accessible wherever you are in the course. You can also check your progress through the course too - you can check which achievements you've attained and which you still need to complete. To the left.

Animal Cell Technology: Products from Cells, Cells as Products European Society of Animal Cell Technology. General Meeting, Alain

Bernard,1999 This book contains in the form of concise papers of limited length the proceedings of the 16th ESACT meeting that was held in Lugano Switzerland in April 1999 We hope it will become a useful resource of the most up to date information in animal cell technology at least until the next meeting in 2001 Classical approaches for the use of animal cells for example production of virus vaccines remain an important technology However it appears that major technological advances and major growth are occurring in other areas Most importantly protein production on the basis of recombinant DNA molecules transferred into animal cells appears to be an ever increasing field of interest and innovation Increasingly animal cells are being used as substrates for the study of gene activation and repression and also for the more rapid production of small and moderate quantities of interesting proteins Tissue engineering somatic gene cell therapy organ replacement technologies and cell based bio sensors all contribute to a considerable widening of interest and research activity based on animal cell technology WJEC Level 1/2 Vocational Award in Hospitality and Catering Bev
