Payer Provider Consumer Industry Confronts Health Care Costs:

Payer, Provider, Consumer: Industry Confronts Health Care Costs D.C. Walsh, R.H. Egdahl, 2012-12-06 With this first monograph Springer Verlag launches an unusual publishing venture The purpose of the Springer Series on Industry and Health Care is to explore in depth the current and potential future role of industry both management and labor in all private sector enterprises as a financier of health care benefits as a provider of health care services and as an extremely influential consumer of health care The assumption behind the series is that private industry has the capability as an alternative to increased government intervention to effect major change in the health care delivery system and is beginning to show evidence of exercising that influence The subject matter covered by the series crosses boundaries between disciplines and specialties occupational medicine medical care public health economics business administration law public policy medical sociology and arises in disparate arenas labor management relations corporate negotiations with insurance carriers physician patient interactions public policy and politics The Springer Series will draw much of its material from interdisciplinary working conferences will analyze and synthesize the discussions add timely background material and be published within no more than six months of the conferences on which they build The series will consist of four monographs a year and two volumes of background papers Payer, Provider, Consumer Diana Chapman Walsh, Richard Harrison Egdahl, 1977-12-13 Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), 1979 Includes subject section name section and 1968 1970 technical reports Health Planning Bibliography Series, 1980 Health planning reports subject index United States. Fike, 1983 Corporate Attempts to Reorganize the American Health Care System Jack Warren Salmon, 1978 Containing Health Benefit Costs R. H. Egdahl, D. C. Walsh, 2012-12-06 The springboard for this sixth volume in the Industry and Health Care series was a conference sponsored by the Center for Industry and Health Care of Boston University on June 9 and 10 1978 That conference had a gradual genesis Over a year ago we spent some time with Kevin Stokeld of Deere and Company and heard his views on self insurance and self administration as one device for a corporation to achieve better management control of its health benefit More recent discussions with representatives of American Telephone and Telegraph Company and other corporations made it increasingly clear to us that management's need for data to monitor the use of employee health benefits was emerging as a critical policy issue Subsequent meetings with executives at John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company in Boston and Mobil Oil Corporation in New York among others convinced us that simple answers would be elusive or inadequate and that there was a need for an objective and careful look at the evolving relationships between employee health benefits claims administration health services utilization and corporate health care cost containment programs Since self funding and particularly self administration represent a fundamental change in the traditional insurance relationship the conference was convened to explore the advantages and disadvantages of self insurance for employee health benefits with some attention to claims production but with special emphasis on the originating question of data for effective management of an employee health benefit

Close followers of the evolution of the Series on Industry and Health Care will recognize in this fourth volume some continuity and some change The essential concept behind the series remains here as before we are looking to private industry as a potential agent of change in the American health care delivery system We have made some structural accommodations however to comments received from readers in industry and in health services The original concept of a topical monograph supplemented by a separate hardbound volume of background papers has yielded to the present formula in which each volume is complete in itself The series continues to draw much of its material from interdisciplinary working conferences convened by the Boston University Center for Industry and Health Care Rather than publish conference proceedings we have again undertaken to analyze the discussions and to integrate with them some timely background materials Readers have found this format a major improvement over traditional conference reports and summaries
