was literature so often defended and defined in early modern England in terms of its ability to provide the Horatian ideal of both profit and pleasure This book first published in 2000 analyses Renaissance literary theory in the context of social transformations of the period focusing on conflicting ideas about gentility that emerged as the English aristocracy evolved from a feudal warrior class to a civil elite Through close readings centered on works by Thomas Elyot Philip Sidney and Edmund Spenser Matz argues that literature attempted to mediate a complex set of contradictory social expectations His original study engages with important theoretical work such as Pierre Bourdieu's and offers a substantial critique of New Historicist theory It challenges recent accounts of the power of Renaissance authorship emphasizing the uncertain status of literature during this time of cultural change and sheds light on why and how canonical works became canonical A/AS

Writing on the Renaissance Stage Frederick Kiefer, 1996 Playwrights also made extraordinary use of metaphors involving the written and printed word to describe the workings of the mind and the interaction of people Christianity Outside the Box Nigel Scotland, 2012-12-03 A major aspect of the history of Christian missions is the way groups who have jumped the ecclesiastical ship have renewed and recalled their parent bodies back to biblical roots and a biblical vision This book examines fourteen such vibrant Christian movements which operated outside the box Each chapter ends with a practical section highlighting those factors that made the particular group successful They were all missional movements that pursued a Christian vision and developed structures to facilitate it In contrast the traditional organizations from which they emerged tended to do mission from an established given structure Here are seriously committed movements that offer a dynamic challenge to our contemporary churches John Jewel and the English National Church Gary W. Jenkins, 2016-05-06

John Jewel 1522 1571 has long been regarded as one of the key figures in the shaping of the Anglican Church A Marian exile he returned to England upon the accession of Elizabeth I and was appointed bishop of Salisbury in 1560 and wrote his famous Apologia Ecclesiae Anglicanae two years later The most recent monographs on Jewel now over forty years old focus largely on his theology casting him as deft scholar adept humanist precursor to Hooker arbiter of Anglican identity and seminal mind in the formation of Anglicanism Yet in light of modern research it is clear that much of this does not stand up to closer examination In this work Gary Jenkins argues that far from serving as the constructor of a positive Anglican identity Jewel's real contribution pertains to the genesis of its divided and schizophrenic nature Drawing on a variety of sources and scholarship he paints a picture not of a theologian and humanist but an orator and rhetorician who persistently breached the rules of logic and the canons of Renaissance humanism in an effort to claim polemical victory over his traditionalist opponents such as Thomas Harding By taking such an iconoclastic approach to Jewel this work not only offers a radical reinterpretation of the man but of the Church he did so much to shape It provides a vivid insight into the intent and ends of Jewel with respect to what he saw the Church of England under the Elizabethan settlement to be as well as into the unintended consequences of his work In so doing it demonstrates how he used his Patristic sources often uncritically and faultily as foils against his theological interlocutors and without the least intention of creating a coherent theological system

Writing the Materialities of the Past Sam Griffiths, 2021-06-14 Writing the Materialities of the Past offers a close analysis of how the materiality of the built environment has been repressed in historical thinking since the 1950s Author Sam Griffiths argues that the social theory of cities in this period was characterised by the dominance of socio economic and linguistic cultural models which served to impede our understanding of time space relationality towards historical events and their narration The book engages with studies of historical writing to discuss materiality in the built environment as a form of literary practice to express marginalised dimensions of social experience in a range of historical contexts It then moves on to reflect on England s nineteenth century industrialization from an architectural topographical perspective challenging theories of space and architecture to examine the complex role of industrial cities in mediating social changes in the practice of everyday life By demonstrating how the authenticity of historical accounts rests on materially emplaced narratives Griffiths makes the case for the emancipatory possibilities of historical writing He calls for a re evaluation of historical epistemology as a primarily socio scientific or literary enquiry and instead proposes a specifically architectural time space figuration of historical events to rethink and refresh the relationship of the urban past to its present and future Written for postgraduate students researchers and academics in architectural theory and urban studies Griffiths draws on the space syntax tradition of research to explore how contingencies of movement and encounter construct the historical imagination      National Union Catalog ,1978 Includes entries for maps and atlases
