Infants' Sense of People Maria Legerstee, 2005-12-08

Infants' Sense of People focusses on infants during their first year of life exploring how they begin to think about other people their feelings emotions and intentions and how they become aware of these aspects of their own development Drawing on a broad range of research and developmental theory Maria Legerstee takes the view that infants have an innate sense of people at birth which is activated through sympathetic emotions She questions the idea that infants use physical parameters such as contingencies or motion to distinguish people from objects and rejects the assumption that infants are mechanical creatures before they become psychological ones She argues persuasively that before infants learn to speak interactions with others are possible because infants have a primitive pre linguistic theory of mind This accessible book provides a valuable synthesis of current thinking on early social and cognitive development and the origins of theory of mind

Constraints on Language Acquisition Helen Tager-Flusberg, 2014-02-25

After decades of research most scholars generally agree that language acquisition is a complex and multifaceted process that involves the interaction of innate biologically based mechanisms devoted to language other non linguistic cognitive and social mechanisms linguistic input and information about the social and physical world Theoretical work in the field of language acquisition now needs to focus in greater depth and detail on some specific aspects of this general model which is the main goal of this book The chapters in this volume provide some new insights into one of the most remarkable accomplishments achieved by almost all children The particular questions that are raised by contributors include What kinds of constraints operate on the process of language development Which aspects of the acquisition process depend on language specific mechanisms Are there critical brain structures necessary for the acquisition of language What role do cognitive and social mechanisms play in language development How critical is perceptual input about the physical and social world What is the specific role played by linguistic input in the child's construction of a linguistic system Questions are addressed from the perspective of children who come to the task of acquiring language with many hurdles to overcome including deafness and blindness mental retardation autism and prenatal or perinatal brain damage involving the left hemisphere Each section contributes some insight on how an innate language specific biological substrate interacts with cognitive and social factors as well as external information to support the child's construction of a linguistic system Studies of atypical children offer a singular contribution to this enterprise by allowing us to see the specific influences of each component and in turn they shed new light on how all children are able to acquire language so effortlessly and during such a brief period of development
