Culver,2022-03-24 As a transnational history of science Japan's Empire of Birds Aristocrats Anglo Americans and Transwar Ornithology focuses on the political aspects of highly mobile Japanese explorer scientists or cosmopolitan gentlemen of science circulating between Japanese and British American spaces in the transwar period from the 1920s to 1950s Annika A Culver examines a network of zoologists united by their practice of ornithology and aristocratic status She goes on to explore issues of masculinity and race related to this amidst the backdrop of imperial Japan's interwar period of peaceful internationalism the rise of fascism the Japanese takeover of Manchuria and war in China and the Pacific Culver concludes by investigating how these scientists repurposed their aims during Japan's Allied Occupation and the Cold War Inspired by geographer Doreen Massey themes covered in the volume include social space and place in these specific locations and how identities transform to garner social capital and scientific credibility in transnational associations and travel for non white scientists

The Encyclopædia Britannica:
Austria Lower-Bisectrix, 1910 The Encyclopaedia Britannica: Aus to Cal, 1910 The Encyclopaedia Britannica:

Austria Lower-Bisectrix, 1910 The last great work of the age of reason the final instance when all human knowledge could be presented with a single point of view Unabashed optimism and unabashed racism pervades many entries in the 11th and provide its defining characteristics Despite its occasional ugliness the reputation of the 11th persists today because of the staggering depth of knowledge contained within its volumes It is especially strong in its biographical entries These delve deeply into the history of men and women prominent in their eras who have since been largely forgotten except by the historians scholars The Guardian <https://www.theguardian.com/books/booksblog/2012/apr/10/encyclopedia-britannica-11th-edition> The Encyclopedia Britannica, 1910 Darwinism \(1889\): An Exposition of the Theory of Natural Selection with some of its Applications Alfred Russel Wallace, 1905-01-01 The title of Mr Darwin's great work is On the Origin of Species by means of Natural Selection and the Preservation of Favoured Races in the Struggle for Life In order to appreciate fully the aim and object of this work and the change which it has effected not only in natural history but in many other sciences it is necessary to form a clear conception of the meaning of the term species to know what was the general belief regarding them at the time when Mr Darwin's book first appeared and to understand what he meant and what was generally meant by discovering their origin It is for want of this preliminary knowledge that the majority of educated persons who are not naturalists are so ready to accept the innumerable objections criticisms and difficulties of its opponents as proofs that the Darwinian theory is unsound while it also renders them unable to appreciate or even to comprehend the vast change which that theory has effected in the whole mass of thought and opinion on the great question of evolution The term species was thus defined by the celebrated botanist De Candolle A species is a collection of all the individuals which resemble each other more than they resemble anything else which can by mutual fecundation produce fertile individuals and which reproduce themselves by generation in such a manner that we may from analogy suppose them all to have sprung from one single individual And the zoologist Swainson gives a somewhat similar definition A species in the usual acceptation of the term is an animal which in a state of nature is distinguished by certain peculiarities of form size colour or other circumstances from another animal It propagates after its kind individuals perfectly resembling the parent its peculiarities therefore are permanent 1 To illustrate these definitions we will take two common English birds the rook Corvus frugilegus and the crow Corvus corone These are distinct species because in the first place they always differ from each other in certain slight peculiarities of structure form and habits and in the second place because rooks always produce rooks and crows produce crows and they do not interbreed It was therefore concluded that all the rooks in the world had descended from a single pair of rooks and the crows in like manner from a single pair of crows while it was considered impossible that crows could have descended from rooks or vice vers The origin of the first pair of each kind was a mystery Similar remarks may be applied to our two common plants the sweet violet Viola odorata and the dog violet Viola canina These also produce their like and never produce each other or intermingle and they were therefore each supposed to have sprung from a single individual whose origin was unknown But besides the crow and the rook there are about thirty other kinds of birds in various parts of the world all so much like our species that they receive the common name of crows and some of them differ less from each other than does our crow from our rook These are all species of the genus Corvus and were therefore believed to have been always as distinct as they are now neither more nor less and to have each descended from one pair of ancestral crows of the same identical species which themselves had an unknown origin Of violets there are more than a hundred different kinds in various parts of the world all differing very slightly from each other and forming distinct species of the genus Viola But as these also each produce their like and do not intermingle it was believed that every one of them had always been as distinct from all the others as it is now that all the individuals of each kind had descended from one ancestor but that the origin of these hundred slightly differing ancestors was unknown In the words of Sir John Herschel quoted by Mr Darwin the origin of such species was the mystery of mysteries
