learns what and how do they learn it Gaea Leinhardt and Karen Knutson set out to investigate these questions through the conversations of museum visitors The model they developed from their research owes much to sociocultural theory and they challenge others to think about certain specific features of the museum experience in order to understand and define learning They advocate an expanded concept of learning for museums and for more formal schooling environments Leinhardt and Knutson add their voices to what they call the extended conversation that is ongoing among thoughtful practitioners with an interest in formal and informal learning in museums

Simulating Visitor Behavior Kutay Güler, 2016-02-29 The dynamics of the interplay between the visitor and the exhibition environment form complex circulation patterns As an exhibition designer developing an understanding of those dynamics is important for improving visitor satisfaction However an overwhelming number of variables may transform the exhibition design process into educated guesswork Designing through trial and error is just not feasible In addition as a result of the nature of creating built environments modifying decisions later in the design process results in significant costs The designer has to rely on extensive experience to succeed Accordingly implementing a method for guidance into the design process should prove valuable for the designer This book discusses the development stages of a simulation application for visitor circulation in exhibition environments and presents the challenges of integrating a complex mathematical process into a visual and artistic process like exhibition design Those issues include understanding the individual stages of development building a theoretical foundation creating a simulation framework composing individual operations and implementing the finalized simulation into the design process Taken together this process sheds light on the underlying challenges of creating a functioning simulation The contents of this book will be beneficial not only for exhibition designers and simulation developers but also anyone interested in visitor behavior and spatial design

Visitors Encounter the Dust Ms. Susan Brent Wise, 2011 The role objects play in a museum visitor's experience is much debated Conn 2010 This study offers an empirical look at how visitors think with objects in a history museum exhibition To study the phenomenon a new method called the head camera protocol was introduced Participants in the study wore a hat outfitted with a video camera and microphone and were instructed to think aloud as they explored an exhibition The resulting video constituted the head camera protocols that were analyzed The exhibition studied was called Elegy in the Dust September 11th and the Chelsea Jeans Memorial On display at the New York Historical Society in 2006 2007 it was built around a primary object called the Chelsea Jeans Memorial a portion of a jeans store covered in dust and ash from the events of September 11th The exhibition also contained photographs of September 11th and its aftermath as well as video of the store owner who donated the Chelsea Jeans Memorial to the Historical Society This study profiles seven participants who walked through the exhibition Among them were two material culture historians two tourists and three Ground Zero volunteers The findings show how visitors think with their bodies and their multiple selves The study also offers an empirical look at how visitors interact with Walter Benjamin's notion of an object's aura 1935 1968 Historical thinking with objects is defined and a visitor object interaction model is proposed Finally implications for the design of learning environments generally and history museums specifically are addressed Museum Experience Revisited John H Falk,Lynn D Dierking,2013 The first book to take a visitor s eye view of the museum visit when it was first published in 1992 The Museum Experience revolutionized the way museum professionals understand their constituents Falk and Dierking have updated this essential reference incorporating advances in research theory and practice in the museum field over the last twenty years Written in clear non technical style The Museum Experience Revisited paints a thorough picture of why people go to museums what they do there how they learn and what museum practitioners can do to enhance these experiences

The Museum Experience Revisited John H Falk,Lynn D Dierking,2016-06-16 The first book to take a visitor s eye view of the museum visit when it was first published in 1992 The Museum Experience revolutionized the way museum professionals understand their constituents Falk and Dierking have updated this essential reference incorporating advances in research theory and practice in the museum field over the last twenty years Written in clear non technical style The Museum Experience Revisited paints a thorough picture of why people go to museums what they do there how they learn and what museum practitioners can do to enhance these experiences Cognitive Development in Museum Settings David M. Sobel,Jennifer L. Jipson,2015-10-30 Researchers in cognitive development are gaining new insights into the ways in which children learn about the world At the same time there has been increased recognition of the important role that visits to informal learning institutions plays in supporting learning Research and practice pursuits typically unfold independently and often with different goals and methods making it difficult to make meaningful connections between laboratory research in cognitive development and practices in informal education Recently groundbreaking partnerships between researchers and practitioners have resulted in innovative strategies for linking findings in cognitive development together with goals critical to museum practitioners such as exhibit evaluation and design Cognitive Development in Museum Settings offers an account of ways in which researchers in cognitive development partner with museum practitioners Each chapter describes a partnership between academic researchers and museum practitioners and details their collaboration the important research that has resulted from their partnership and the benefits and challenges of maintaining their relationship This approach illustrates cutting edge developmental science but also considers how researcher practitioner interactions affect research outcomes and provide insight to questions common to practitioners In addition each set of researchers and practitioners discusses issues brought up by the partnership by posing questions concerning research practice partnerships and research evidence considering whether and how cognitive development research conducted in museum settings aligns with larger disciplinary interests in that field and examining to what extent museum practitioners benefit from applying research on the development of cognitive processes to their educational practices Visiting the Visitor Ann Davis, Kerstin

Smeds, 2016-07-15 The study of the museum visitor has undergone radical transformation Each author here has asked unfamiliar questions and responded with fresh answers Some of these questions involve the visitor's identity what she brings to her museum experience Can we gain entry into this experience Does more technology really increase access to the objects themselves Others probe the very nature of museum going and exhibition making demanding that we reexamine the traditional exhibition to reposition the visitor and her meaning making at the centre The volume provokes imaginative research and encourages new conclusions Identity and the Museum Visitor Experience John H Falk, 2016-06-16 Drawing upon a career in studying museum visitors renowned researcher John Falk attempts to create a predictive model of visitor experience one that can help museum professionals better meet those visitors' needs Creating a Winning Online
