Extinctions in Near Time Ross D.E. MacPhee, Hans-Dieter Sues, 2013-11-09 Near time an interval that spans the last 100 000 years or so of earth history qualifies as a remarkable period for many reasons From an anthropocentric point of view the out standing feature of near time is the fact that the evolution cultural diversification and global spread of Homo sapiens have all occurred within it From a wider biological perspective however the hallmark of near time is better conceived of as being one of enduring repeated loss The point is important Despite the sense of uniqueness implicit in phrases like the biodiversity crisis meant to convey the notion that the present bout of extinctions is by far the worst endured in recent times substantial losses have occurred throughout near time In the majority of cases these losses occurred when and only when people began to expand across areas that had never before experienced their presence Although the explanation for these correlations in time and space may seem obvious it is one thing to rhetorically observe that there is a connection between humans and recent extinctions and quite another to demonstrate it scientifically. How should this be done? Traditionally the study of past extinctions has fallen largely to researchers steeped in such disciplines as paleontology, systematics and paleoecology. The evaluation of future losses by contrast has lain almost exclusively within the domain of conservation biologists. Now more than ever there is opportunity for overlap and sharing of information. Ichthyological Exploration of Freshwaters, 2009 Pet Business, 1996
