

PREFACE

With the embers of destruction barely cooling after the conclusion of World War II, the United States became involved in Viet Nam—through a series of commissions and omissions—in what may well become one of the economically and morally costliest wars in history. First through military aid to the embattled French, then through its military missions, and finally—since 1962—by the ever expanding commitment of its own troops, the United States sought military and political victory in a war fought for control over the hearts and minds of a peasant people. During these years, “the raggedy little bastards in black pajamas”—as United States military officers referred to their new enemies—have not only fought to a standstill the mightiest military machine in history, but caused many an American to wonder, silently or aloud, why “our” Vietnamese do not fight like “their” Vietnamese, why ever new recruits replenish the ranks of an army destroyed many times over in our dispatches and news communiqués. Yet ignorance courts disaster. Viet Nam has become a graveyard because Americans did not know enough or care enough about a little-known part of Southeast Asia. The roads to the Mekong delta, to Tay Ninh, to Khe San are strewn with the wreckage of false premises, perceptions, and evaluations. Therefore it is important to America that she bend all her available knowledge—and her considerable power of passion and compassion—to the task of comprehending the world in which she has become such a stranger. Four years ago, on March 17 and 18, some of us at the University of Michigan initiated the “teach-in” movement on the Viet Nam war; from here the great
