(c) Amendment of Article 25(2)(b) of the Constitution

22. A completely new demand was raised by the Akali Dal in January 1984 asking for an amendment of Article 25(2)(b) of the Constitution. Simultaneously an agitation was announced for burning and mutilation of copies of the Constitution of India. Even though this demand was raised, the Akali Dal was not clear about the nature of the amendment. On May 1, 1984, it was reported that SGPC President had constituted a 21-member committee of experts to suggest relevant amendments.

23. Even though Government maintain that Article 25(2)(b), far from weakening the distinct identity of the Sikh community was in fact a recognition of that identity, it wanted to allay any misgivings on this point. Accordingly the Home Minister declared on March 31, 1984 that the Government would be prepared to consult the SGPC and other representatives of the Sikh community as well as legal experts and undertake such legislation by way of amendment as may be necessary to remove such doubts.

24. The Akali Dal also wanted to link the demands for the amendment of Article 25 with the idea of a separate personal law for the Sikhs. However, no concrete proposals have been submitted.

25. The timing and manner in which the demand for amendment of Article 25 was presented are typical of the Akali Dal's approach to negotiations. When some issues appeared to have been settled, new issues were raised, thereby frustrating the possibility of a settlement. The Akali Dal appeared to want to keep an agitation going on some issue or other, regardless of the consequences of such agitation which progressively grew more and more violent.

This is the first cultural and literary history of India and the First World War with archival research from Europe and South Asia Labors of Division Navyug Gill,2024-01-16 One of the most durable figures in modern history the peasant has long been a site of intense intellectual and political debate Yet underlying much of this literature is the assumption that peasants simply existed everywhere a general if not generic group traced backward from modernity to antiquity Focused on the transformation of Panjab during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries this book accounts for the colonial origins of global capitalism through a radical history of the concept of the peasant demonstrating how seemingly fixed hierarchies were in fact produced legitimized and challenged within the preeminent agricultural region of South Asia Navyug Gill uncovers how and why British officials and ascendant Panjabis disrupted existing forms of identity and occupation to generate a new agrarian order in the countryside The notion of the hereditary caste peasant engaged in timeless cultivation thus emerged paradoxically as a result of a dramatic series of conceptual juridical and monetary divisions Far from archaic relics this book ultimately reveals both the landowning peasant and landless laborer to be novel political subjects forged through the encounter between colonialism and struggles over culture and capital within Panjabi society Questions of progress exploitation and knowledge come to animate the vernacular operations of power With this history Gill brings difference and contingency to understandings of the global past in order to re think the itinerary of comparative political economy as well as alternative possibilities for emancipatory futures
