Frank, 2022-02-02 Griot Potters of the Folona reconstructs the past of a particular group of West African women potters using evidence found in their artistry and techniques The potters of the Folona region of southeastern Mali serve a diverse clientele and firing thousands of pots weekly during the height of the dry season Although they identify themselves as Mande the unique styles and types of objects the Folona women make and more importantly the way they form and fire them are fundamentally different from Mande potters to the north and west Through a brilliant comparative analysis of pottery production methods across the region especially how the pots are formed and the way the techniques are taught by mothers to daughters Barbara Frank concludes that the mothers of the potters of the Folona very likely came from the south and east marrying Mande griots West African leatherworkers who are better known as storytellers or musicians as they made their way south in search of clientele as early as the 14th or 15th century CE While the women may have nominally given up their mothers identities through marriage over the generations the potters preserved their maternal heritage through their technological style passing this knowledge on to their daughters and thus transforming the very nature of what it means to be a Mande griot This is a story of resilience and the continuity of cultural heritage in the hands of women Sculpture of Black Africa Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, 1970 The Mande Blacksmiths Patrick R. McNaughton, 1988 Finely crafted scholarship Elegant and graceful yet packed with knowledge and information it embodies the aesthetic qualities which it describes and explores American Ethnologist The text is detailed and informative and enjoyable reading Choice The Mande Blacksmith is an important book sensitive sympathetic multifaceted and thorough African Arts McNaughton s Mande Blacksmiths is undeniably the most profound study of African artists yet published Ethnoarts penetrating McNaughton boldly grapples with the thorniest issues related to his subject and articulates them with clarity and precision International Journal of African Historical Studies a work in the best tradition of ethnographic research critical reappraisal innovative inquiry and fresh observation make this book an invaluable fund of new material on Mande societies American Anthropologist McNaughton provides an important interpretation of these artists conceptual place as members of a complex culture Religious Studies Review Examining the artistic technological social and spiritual dimensions of Mande blacksmiths who are the sculptors of their society McNaughton defines these artists conceptual place as extraordinary members of a complex culture Art History and Its Institutions Elizabeth Mansfield, 2002 What is art history The answer depends on who asks the question Museum staff academics art critics collectors dealers and artists themselves all stake competing claims to the aims methods and history of art history Dependent on and sustained by different and often competing institutions art history remains a multi faceted field of study Art History and Its Institutions focuses on the professional and institutional formation of art history showing how the discourses that shaped its creation continue to define the field today Grouped into three sections articles examine the sites where art history is taught and studied the role of institutions in conferring legitimacy the relationship between modernism and art history and the systems that define and control it From museums and universities to law courts and photography studios the contributors explore a range of different institutions revealing the complexity of their interaction and their impact on the discipline of art history BOOK JACKET

Dynamic Aspects Of Natural Products Chemistry Takeshi Ogura, 1997-11-21 Preface Natural products chemistry has a long history and could be regarded as having its roots in the use of many kinds of herbal mixtures as crude drugs in traditional medicine Systems of traditional medicine have been practiced in China and Japan for thousands of years and virtually all regions of the world have used natural materials to treat human disease It was clear that many plants herbs etc contain components with powerful biological activities The dawn of modern natural products chemistry began with the isolation of the active component morphine from opium Subsequently various alkaloids were isolated from medicinal plants and employed clinically The discovery and the development of penicillin as a microbial metabolite opened up the era of antibiotics which have saved countless lives in the past half century or so The isolation and synthesis of steroid hormones resulted in the development of new concepts in molecular stereochemistry and organic synthetic techniques as did the discovery of bioactive lipids such as prostaglandins and leukatrienes bioactive peptides such as enkephalins and endetherines and oligosaccharides including glycoproteins Further the discovery of plant hormones has led to great strides in plant biotechnology including plant tissue cultures and derivatives of insect hormones and pheromones are now used as pesticides Thus applications of natural products chemistry have become all pervasive in modern society Apart from the extensive practical applications of natural products and their derivatives natural products chemistry has played a central role in the development of modern organic chemistry as a result of its focus on structural and synthetic studies of often highly complex and inaccessible molecules Biosynthetic studies have also attracted much attention aiming to answer the questions of why and how such a large number and variety of compounds are synthesised by organisms Researchers in the field of biosynthesis first focused on elucidation of the pathways of secondary metabolism and then on the mechanisms of the enzymes catalyzing the biosynthetic reactions This was an extremely difficult task because rather large amounts of enzymes are required for the investigation of reaction mechanisms and the enzyme proteins are often unstable and not easy to purify However in recent years the development of molecular biology has made gene and protein engineering rather routine Thus studies of mechanistic enzymology can now be conducted with cloned and overexpressed enzyme proteins It has been shown that the enzymes responsible for the biosynthesis of antibiotics in Streptomyces spp are encoded in gene clusters Further cloning and functional analysis of the genes associated with flavonoid biosynthesis should soon cast light on the interesting question of why flavonoids are ubiquitously present in plant leaves Life is maintained not only by large molecules such as proteins and nucleic acids but also by many small molecules which have essential and diverse roles in the physiology of living organisms Such compounds often have highly specific interactions with target receptors but the mechanisms involved largely remain to be explored Current methodology means that this task can be addressed and this in turn should lead to a host of new applications for natural products and their derivatives The key may be an interdisciplinary approach taking account of both biological function and molecular behaviour based on precise structure recognition As we increasingly understand the mechanisms of molecular recognition that operate in nature many possibilities should open up for artificial control or modification of biological functions as well as new challenges for synthetic organic chemists Our intention in this book is to focus on such dynamic aspects of natural products chemistry By dealing in detail with representative topics to which the most modern techniques of research have been applied we hope to emphasize the value of combining traditional approaches to natural products chemists with current biochemical and molecular biological ideas Each chapter provides sufficient background information and experimental detail to make the subject accessible to non specialists It is our hope that these examples of recent progress in key areas of natural products chemistry will stimulate work in related topics by illustrating the power of a modern interdisciplinary approach to the subject
