Lost Found In Translation Contemporar:

Cutter, 2006-05-18 Starting with Salman Rushdie's assertion that even though something is always lost in translation something can always be gained Martha Cutter examines the trope of translation in twenty English language novels and autobiographies by contemporary ethnic American writers She argues that these works advocate a politics of language diversity a literary and social agenda that validates the multiplicity of ethnic cultures and tongues in the United States Cutter studies works by Asian American Native American African American and Mexican American authors She argues that translation between cultures languages and dialects creates a new language that in its diversity constitutes the true heritage of the United States Through the metaphor of translation Cutter demonstrates writers such as Maxine Hong Kingston Sherman Alexie Toni Morrison and Richard Rodriguez establish a place within American society for the many languages spoken by multiethnic and multicultural individuals Cutter concludes with an analysis of contemporary debates over language policy such as English only legislation the recognition of Ebonics and the growing acceptance of bilingualism The focus on translation by so many multiethnic writers she contends offers hope in our postmodern culture for a new condition in which creatively fused languages renovate the communications of the dominant society and create new kinds of identity for multicultural individuals

Chinese Rhetoric and Writing Andy Kirkpatrick,Zhichang Xu,2012-03-07 Andy Kirkpatrick and and Zhichang Xu offer a response to the argument that Chinese students academic writing in English is influenced by culturally nuanced rhetorical baggage that is uniquely Chinese and hard to eradicate Noting that this argument draws from an essentially monolingual and Anglo centric view of writing they point out that the rapid growth in the use of English worldwide calls for a radical reassessment of what English is in today s world The result is a book that provides teachers of writing and in particular those involved in the teaching of English academic writing to Chinese students an introduction to key stages in the development of Chinese rhetoric a wide ranging field with a history of several thousand years Understanding this important rhetorical tradition provides a strong foundation for assessing and responding to the writing of this growing group of students
