

A detailed botanical line drawing of a grass plant, likely a species of Panicum, serves as the background for the title page. The illustration shows the entire plant, including its roots, basal leaves, and several upright culms. One culm is in the foreground, showing its nodes and sheaths. Another culm in the background bears a long, dense panicle of spikelets. To the left of the main plant, there are three detailed drawings of individual grass components: a single spikelet, a single glume or lemma, and a single grain or caryopsis. The text is overlaid on this illustration in a white, serif font.
