Affecting Mycorrhizal Use in Surface Mine Reclamation Michael R. Norland,1993 Surface and subsurface stabilization of mining related wastes through revegetation depends upon the physical chemical and biological condition of the waste following mining Mining disturbances can significantly alter the physical chemical and biological characteristics of a site reducing or eliminating mycorrhizal fungi from the soil Mycorrhizae are economically and ecologically important because they can alleviate environmental stresses caused by lack of proper soil condition and because they are vital to stabilization of mining waste by increasing plant survival and biomass through increased nutrient and water uptake This report discusses some of the ecological factors that may affect mycorrhizae plant associations on mining related wastes and provides general information on mycorrhizae inoculation technology History of the Northeastern Research Station, 1973 to 1998 Eldon W. Ross,1998 Waste Management and the Environment V Viktor Popov,H. Itoh,U. Mander,C. A. Brebbia,2010 The International Conference on Waste Management and the Environment is organised every two years by the Wessex Institute of Technology in collaboration with other institutions This fifth conference follows the success of previous meetings held in C diz 2002 Rhodes 2004 Malta 2006 and Granada 2008 Waste Management is becoming one of the key problems of the modern world an international issue that is intensified by the volume and complexity of domestic and industrial waste discarded by society Unfortunately many of the practices adopted in the past were aimed at short term solutions without sufficient regard or knowledge for long term implications on health the environment or sustainability and this in many cases is leading to the need to take difficult and expensive remedial action With our growing awareness of the detrimental environmental effects of current waste disposal there is a significant onus of accountability for effective waste management Better practice and safer solutions are required Not only is there a need for more research on current disposal methods such as landfill incineration chemical and effluent treatment but also on recycling waste minimisation clean technologies waste monitoring public and corporate awareness and general education
