Shattered Stones:

The First Stones William Britnell, Alasdair Whittle, 2022-12-01 The First Stones brings together the results of recent research on the Neolithic long cairns lying in the shadow of the Black Mountains in south east Wales focusing upon Pen-y-wyrldod and Gwernvle the two best known tombs within the group previously excavated in the 1970s Important results lie in both new site detail and reassessment of the wider context Small scale excavation geophysical survey and geological assessment at Pen-y-wyrldod the largest of the Welsh long cairns gave further information about the distinctive external and internal architecture of the monument In turn this opened the opportunity to reassess the pre monument sequence at Gwernvle with re examination of both Mesolithic and Neolithic occupations including a timber structure and midden lithic and pottery assemblages and cereal remains The frame for wider reassessment is given by fresh chronological modeling both of the monuments themselves suggesting a sequence from Pen-y-wyrldod and Pipton to Ty Isaf and Gwernvle probably spanning the 38th to the 36th or 35th centuries cal BC and of early Neolithic activity in south Wales and the Marches probably beginning in the 39th century cal BC A detailed study of the major assemblages of human remains from the Black Mountains tombs includes evidence for diet trauma and lifestyles of the populations represented Recent isotope analysis of human remains from the tombs is also reviewed implying social mobility and migration within local populations during the early Neolithic The First Stones makes a significant contribution to the study of tomb building treatment of the dead place making the relationship of monuments to landscape local and regional identities connections and affiliations across southern Britain and the adjacent continent and Neolithization in western Britain Viewed within the context of tombs within the Cotswold Severn tradition as a whole it leads to an appreciation of the local and regional distinctiveness of architecture and mortuary practice exhibited by the tombs in this area of south east Wales emerging as part of the intake of a significant inland area in the early centuries of the Neolithic

Bronze Age Settlement and Land-Use in Thy, Northwest Denmark (Volume 1 & 2) Jens-Henrik Bech, Kristian Kristiansen, Berit Valentin Eriksen, 2018-06-04 This two volume monograph about the region of Thy in the early Bronze Age provides a high resolution archaeological and ecological model of the organisation of landscape settlements and households during the period 1500-1100 BC Bordering the North Sea to the west and the calmer waters of the Limfjord to the east the region of Thy in Denmark experienced four centuries of intense economic and demographic expansion By combining results from environmental and economic research pollen and palaeo botanical analyses with intensive field surveys and excavations of farmsteads with exceptional preservation it has been possible to open a window to the changes that transformed Bronze Age society and its environment during a few centuries of exceptional expansion and wealth consumption The results from this interdisciplinary venture made it possible to link together the histories of local farmsteads with the wider regional and global history of the Bronze Age in North western Europe during this period Here is much to feed on for students and researchers of the Bronze Age alike Westward on the High-Hilled Plains Derek Hurst,2017-03-31 The West Midlands has struggled archaeologically to project a distinct regional identity having largely been defined by reference to other areas with a stronger cultural identity and history such as Wessex the South West and the North Only occasionally has the West Midlands come to prominence for instance in the middle Saxon period viz the kingdom of Mercia or much later with rural south Shropshire being the birthplace of the Industrial rRevolution Yet it is a region rich in natural mineral resources set amidst readily productive farmland and with major rivers such as the Severn facilitating transportation The scale of its later prehistoric monuments notably the hillforts proclaims the centralisation of some functions whether for security exchange or emulation while society supported the production and widespread distribution of specialised craft goods Finally towards the close of prehistory localised kingdoms can be seen to emerge into view In the course of reviewing the evidence for later prehistory from the Middle Bronze Age to Late Iron Age the papers presented here adopt a variety of approaches being either regional county wide or thematic eg by site type or artefactual typology and they also encompass the wider landscape as reconstructed from environmental evidence This is the second volume in a series The Making of the West Midlands that explores the archaeology of the English West Midlands region from the Lower Palaeolithic onwards These volumes based on a series of West Midlands Research Framework seminars aim to transform perceptions of the nature and significance of the archaeological evidence across a large part of central Britain
