The Geography of Agriculture in Developed Market Economies I.R. Bowler, 2014-10-13 First published in 1993 The broad objective of this book is to describe and explain the contemporary geography of agriculture in developed market economies The objective has been approached by a team of agricultural geographers each writer contributing an analysis of a particular topic Principles of Agricultural Economics David Colman, Trevor Young, 1989-02-09 This textbook addresses the main economic principles required by agricultural economists involved in rural development The principles of micro economics or price theory are of relevance to economists everywhere but this book reinforces the message of their relevance for rural development by explaining the theory in the specific context of the agricultural and food sectors of developing countries Hypothetical and actual empirical illustrations drawn almost exclusively from such countries distinguish this book from other economic principles texts that draw their examples almost invariably from industrialised countries and also from books more oriented to the issue of rural development The first half of the book deals with the underlying principles of production supply and demand These are essential tools for the study and management of the agricultural sector and food markets In the second half supply and demand are brought together into a chapter of equilibrium and exchange This is followed by chapters on trade and the theory of economic welfare In the final chapter it is shown that much of the material in the earlier chapters can be combined by agricultural economists into a system for analysing and comparing the effects of alternative agricultural policies The ability of agricultural economics to provide a consistent framework for the analysis of policy problems thus enables it to make a key contribution to rural development Economics of the European Union Michael Artis, Frederick Nixon, 2007-05-17 The new edition of this successful text analyses the current economic issues facing a rapidly changing Europe The authors combine policy history and data to present a global perspective of the EU written with a range of students taking an introductory module in European Economics in mind With new material on the economic relationship between the EU and the US Enlargement and the Lisbon process the authors consider the changing landscape and Europe's development as a major global player The authors use history theory and analysis including comparative data to evaluate Economic policies ranging from the Common Agricultural Policy and Competition Policy to Social Policy and Monetary Policy and to assess issues such as unemployment and foreign aid The contributors are drawn from a range of Universities such as Vienna Manchester Brussels LSE and Purdue as well as institutions such as the IMF and the European Central Bank

Agriculture, the Countryside and Land Use J. K. Bowers, Paul Cheshire, 2019-08-06 First published in 1983 How had the situation developed in which agriculture had become such a creature of state protection where public money supported prosperous landowners while poor farmers received practically nothing Where the value of agricultural support exceeded net farm income and vastly exceeded the level of support available to British Steel or British Rail In answering these questions John Bowers and Paul Cheshire examined the real value of agricultural support in successive policy phases since the Second World War and analysed the effects this support had on income distribution Their thesis was that agricultural change including the transfer of land from traditional farmers to institutions and corporations was not the product of impersonal progress but the direct result of agricultural support policies resting on specious economic arguments The authors analysis of this subject has inescapable relevance for the policymaker for the taxpayer and consumer of foodstuffs for the urban user of the British countryside and indeed for farmers and the farming lobby Agriculture the Countryside and Land Use will be an important book for all these groups and also for students of agriculture geography and economics

The Great Curse R. Albert Berry, 2024 Land is the key input for economies in the earliest stages of development when seventy five percent to ninety percent of the labor force is engaged in agriculture Concentration of land ownership has been a common and usually quite damaging feature of most societies throughout history as both the cause and the result of access to power Highly unequal control of land typically implies severe inequality of income and welfare as well Landlessness has been at the root of many of the world's most serious and persistent problems including severe exploitation and the deprivation of political rights and basic human needs Historically the motivation for many revolutions has been access to land This volume reviews the land reform experiences of multiple countries during the twentieth century The experiences I covered illustrate the widespread need for reform the great difficulties facing major changes and the extreme cost of failure in delicate political moments Looking ahead the biggest challenge will be to avoid the injustices and inequality that have accompanied land concentration in the past

Capstick,2019-08-06 First published in 1970 The aim of this book is to provide an introduction to the special problems of agriculture in modern economies The author writes for students of economics who have already acquired the elements of economic theory no attempt is made therefore to explain simple theoretical concepts but instead these are used in the analysis of some of the main problems of agricultural adjustment Emphasis is placed on the position of agriculture in the economies of western Europe and of the United States Sufficient historical background is given to explain the present use of the factors of production in agriculture and the way in which this use and policies of agricultural support vary from one country to another Agricultural support policies are discussed with reference to their effect on consumers producers and on rural society Asian Profile ,2004 Determinants of Commercial Orientation and Sustainability of Agricultural Production of the Individual Farms in Romania Borbála E. Bálint,2006 Subsistence farming a widespread phenomenon in developing countries emerged as well in Central and East European and former Soviet Union countries during their transformation process from a centrally planned to a market economy Romania is one of the Eastern European countries with a large share of subsistence farmers where the commercialization of agriculture could be a means of reducing rural poverty and increasing the competitiveness of agriculture although with possibly detrimental effects on the environment The study examines which constraints should be addressed to promote commercial orientation and how commercial orientation and ecological sustainability are related Based on an agricultural household survey in 2003 and with the help of econometric analysis the research finds that against the conventional wisdom in the current Romanian context commercial orientation and ecological sustainability are positively related Moreover commercial orientation is negatively influenced by high transaction costs related to the lack of demand from processing factories and wholesalers as well as lack of cooperation
