photographers to question presumptions of home the idea of a homeland and by extension the nation Articulating and imagining the meanings of home one's own or those of others is often an act of confronting one's vulnerability Metaphorical or real homes are necessarily messy worlds that inevitably collide and telescope into each other as their geographical boundaries often intersect and overlap The contributors to this volume in their different ways upend the idea of home as a unit of stability familiarity and familiarity emptying out its significance as a place of nostalgic refuge to which one can always return The ostensibly common universal idea of home is often unhinged they show by the conditions of violence that underpin relations within that space Focusing largely on the Northeastern region often bound together in some way ethnically and geographically this anthology illuminates how political climate as well as geographic sites transform homes How then may we re-imagine home when its significance as a space and place of refuge loses meaning Homeward engages with the boundaries and constraints imposed by messy cartographies and attempts to evoke a poetics of space through the act of writing

Walking with My Eyes Closed William X. Lincoln, 2013-04-17 We all have a story to tell I just decided to write mine in poetry to let people know it's possible to overcome our mountains I'm not perfect but I do have faith This book is about overcoming not just mountains but even ourselves We always think that we know what we are doing and where we're going We have been fooling ourselves in so many ways This book is to let people know they can change their situations Sometimes we must go through it so we can show what faith can do even if it's the size of a mustard seed This book is to let people know that no matter what your past was like you can still become something special Your past only determines your future if you let it This book is about pain from a love one struggles in life regrets victory over the enemy faith love manhood family and the value of living You must have a test in order to have a testimony This book is about becoming a victor and not a victim It's about how you are at your best when you are tired and have nothing left to give But you still hold your head high and keep fighting the good fight Somebody told me that it's better to see where you're going and that the blind can't lead the blind I say that's the problem we depend on man to lead But we also can't see where we're going We must depend on somebody to guide us through the dark times It just depends on who you choose to guide you The blind can't lead the blind because both are blind men I want God to guide me this time That's why I named the book Walking with My Eyes Closed

Cartographies of Transnationalism in Postcolonial Feminisms Jamil Khader, 2013 This book proffers a new theory of the radical possibilities of contemporary postcolonial feminist writings from Africa the Middle East the Americas and the Caribbean against what can be described as actually existing colonialisms These writers include prominent and other less known postcolonial women writers such as Tsitsi Dangarembga Louise Erdrich Aurora Levins Morales Rosario Morales Esmeralda Santiago Raymonda Tawil Michelle Cliff and Rigoberta Mench Negotiating the contradictions among gender nation and globalization postcolonial women writers construct extimate subjectivities that mark their excessive locations in the social field through the dialectical relation between the intimate and the external the intimately or internally external articulating these contradictions within the larger history and narratives of anti colonial internationalist struggle for liberation and emancipation Grounded in a commitment to the future of the postcolonial nation and the project of decolonization and liberation within the ever encroaching neocolonial global capitalist system postcolonial women s narratives of displacing offer not only an alternative mode of ideological critique of scripted and commonly inherited discourses of identity home culture that obfuscate the fundamental social antagonism but also ways of changing them through practices of radical politics The book thus charts four intersecting dialogic strategies by which postcolonial women writers produce extimate subjectivities travel unhomeliness multiple and shifting subject positions and transnational alliances First specific strategies of travel voluntary and involuntary within glocal networks of dispossession displacement and labor migration that foreground their extimate locations as internally external Second tactics of unhomeliness that uncover traces of the foreign and elsewhere in the edifice of the familiar that serve as the basis for interrogating dominant discourses of belonging Third techniques of multiple and shifting subject positions that recognize the excessive location of the extimate subject in order to unravel not only the contingency of the subject s ontic properties but also her locations in the interplay of oppression and privilege And fourth strategies for building political solidarity with transnational and transethnic communities of struggle that are grounded in the concrete Universality of the excluded communities This book bears witness to the radical possibility in contemporary postcolonial feminist writing and promises a way out of the impasse of the current culturalization of politics in the humanities that has resulted from the uncritical celebration of hybridity and the concomitant emphasis on diaspora postnationalism and cosmopolitanism in dominant discourses of postcolonial ethnic and transnational studies

Limits
Giorgos Kallis,2019-08-06 This critical study artfully explores the power of limits A compelling and fittingly concise read for our times Kate Raworth author of Doughnut Economics Western culture is infatuated with the dream of endless economic growth even as it is haunted by the specters of drought famine and nuclear winter How did we come to think of the planet and its limits as we do This book reclaims redefines and makes an impassioned plea for limits a notion central to environmentalism clearing them from their association with Malthusianism and the ideology and politics that go along with it In Limits Giorgos Kallis offers a critical reassessment of economist Thomas Robert Malthus and his legacy He separates the concepts of limits and scarcity which have long been conflated in both environmental and economic thought Limits are not a property of nature to be deciphered by scientists but a choice that confronts us one that paradoxically is part and parcel of the pursuit of freedom Taking us from ancient Greece to Malthus from hunter gatherers to the Romantics from anarchist feminists to 1970s radical environmentalists Limits shows us how an institutionalized culture of sharing can make possible the collective self limitation we so urgently need

This collection encompasses a diverse range of narratives that deftly blend elements of horror, suspense, and the supernatural, showcasing Stoker's exceptional command of language and his ability to evoke a visceral sense of dread. From the chilling narrative of a tragic love lost to the eerie distortions of reality, each tale reveals Stoker's exploration of societal fears and human psychology against the backdrop of the late Victorian era, a time marked by both fervent scientific inquiry and a fascination with the occult.
