Once Upon A Lane Duncan Wilson, 2019-11-23 There once was a lane filled with well tended lawns and well fostered friendships of well appointed houses all neat and tidy and those that live within of stories and mysteries that manifest for only fleeting moments for the few who pay attention This is one such tale A tale about pleasant people about the lives they live about their wants and dreams about their loves and losses their joys and hates about their days and nights in the company of cherished companions in the houses they call home In this tale of the happy little lives of blissful simple folk there are monsters to be sure But this is not the story of monsters this is not the tale of their evil deeds this is the tale of those they make suffer In this tale the monsters have no names The monsters do not deserve names A character driven slice of life story that follows the humble lives of the residents of a suburban neighborhood as they live and love and about the house with the dead yard a vacant lot that sits among their homes inert and immobile yet intimidating and terrifying to any who look at it too long The children of the lane are not the only ones who are fearful of the anomaly in their midst Every adult upon the lane wonders why the structure still stands with no known owner and no reason to be The lingering question is not who owns the house but why no one ever goes in or comes out and why there are such ghastly noises emanating from within Day by day the happy people of the lane go about their tasks and trials and day by day the house with the dead yard seems a little more ominous a little more intrusive and a little less ignorable than before Ann Sheridan Michael D.
