My Road To Microsoft One Woman's Success Story:

A Lab of My Own Neena B. Schwartz, 2010-01-01 What was it like to be a woman scientist battling the old boys network during the 1960s and 1970s Neena Schwartz a prominent neuroendocrinologist at Northwestern University tells all She became a successful scientist and administrator at a time when few women entered science and fewer succeeded in establishing independent laboratories She describes her personal career struggles and those of others in academia as well as the events which lead to the formation of the Association of Women in Science and Women in Endocrinology two national organizations which have been successful in increasing the numbers of women scientists and their influence in their fields The book intersperses this socio political story with an account of Schwartz's personal life as a lesbian and a description of her research on the role of hormones in regulating reproductive cycles In a chapter titled Don't Ask Don't Tell she examines the evidence from a scientist's point of view for the hormonal and genetic theories for homosexuality Other chapters provide advice on mentoring young scientists and a discourse on why it matters to all of us to have more women doing and teaching science She also describes the process of putting together an interdisciplinary Center on Reproductive Science at Northwestern which brought together basic and clinical scientists in an internationally recognized program of research and practice

My Road to Microsoft Soraya Bittencourt, Paula Martinac, 2003 My road to Microsoft is a chronicle of a young woman rise as an engineer in the male dominated field of technology and how her concept became Microsoft Expedia the first successful Internet travel site Woven throughout this memoir is her personal story of coming out as a lesbian and sharing her life for almost 20 years with her partner The book starts in Brazil covering the struggle of becoming an engineer despite society's limited ideas about what girls could achieve Hitting the glass ceiling at age 23 she immigrates to America works as a cleaning woman to survive until obtaining papers to work as an engineer Eventually her idea became the nucleus of Expedia when her disillusion with Microsoft makes her leave in 1998 as a millionaire
