Two Views of Virtue F. F. Centore, 2000-05-30 Centore's work is an inquiry into the weaknesses and strengths of the two basic positions in ethics the man centered model and the God centered model for deciding between right and wrong behavior The philosophical paradigm for the man centered approach is absolute relativism while the paradigm for the God centered approach is relative absolutism Centore argues that the man centered model in actual practice proves not to be realistic as an ethical guide while the God centered model if properly understood is the most useful approach This work penetrates difficult ethical issues by examining human experience and reasoning in conjunction with actual choices of action Although the God centered approach is shown to be the most practical Centore argues for a natural moral law that avoids any specific theology Each chapter discusses the historical and theoretical background of the approaches and two possible compromises The work is enlivened with examples of possible contexts in which moral decisions must take place Various ethical dilemmas are presented with an examination of the potential consequences of applying either the atheistic or the theistic ethical approach Centore's argument is complex but he explains the elements clearly and his conclusion is strengthened by real life cases and an extensive Bibliography

Confusions and Clarifications F. F. Centore, 1997 This book brings together the chief elements of 3 000 years of philosophy as found mainly in Western thought in a highly readable form The work concentrates on problems and issues much more than on names dates and places he book includes an extensive bibliography of works related to the main themes of the text followed by a long list of names and dates of leading historical figures in various fields especially in science philosophy and theology

Unborn Persons James J. McCartney, 1987 Karol Wojtyla Pope John Paul II was a professor of anthropology and ethics at the Catholic University of Lublin Poland long before he was elected Pope During this time his interests centered around the concept of personhood and its many implications in the epistemological metaphysical and ethical spheres In this book after considering the many philosophical and theological influences that helped to form his thought his notion of personhood is discussed with reference to the status of unborn persons that is of embryological and fetal life His approach to personhood is then contrasted and compared with other contemporary notions in an effort to understand more clearly the status of life before birth

Walton, 1985-02-19 Douglas N

Walton considers the question of whether the conventions of informal conversation can be articulated more precisely than they are at present. Specifically, he addresses the problem of the fallacy of ad hominem argumentation as it occurs in natural settings. Can rules be formulated to determine if criticisms of apparent hypocrisy in an argument are defensible or refutable? Walton suggests that they can and ultimately defends the thesis that ad hominem reasoning is not fallacious per se. He carries his analysis to the core of action theoretic reasoning by examining a number of specimen arguments. As suggested by the title, the conclusion of ad hominem argument is demonstrated to be relative to the arguer's position. In the appendixes of the book, articles by Gerald McAuliffe and Gordon R. Lowe illustrate vivid and powerful cases in which Walton's contentions are put to the test.

History of Science Alistair Cameron Crombie, Michael A. Hoskin, 1984. A review of literature and research in the history of science, medicine, and technology in its intellectual and social context.

The Philosopher's Index, 1995. An international index to philosophical periodicals.

Philosophy Arthur J. Minton, Thomas A. Shipka, 1982.

PHILOSOPHY PARADOX AND DISCOVERY 4 e presents philosophy as an immediate, vital, and challenging process of discovery. The text has been specifically designed to help students evaluate their beliefs on basic issues and to see philosophy as a process of discovering and examining the paradoxes inherent in those issues. The forty-one readings in PHILOSOPHY PARADOX AND DISCOVERY are drawn from classic and contemporary sources.

Choice, 1997.

The Culture of Economism Jane Collier, 1990. This study attempts to establish a dialogue between theology and other disciplines. It presents an interdisciplinary analysis of one specific aspect of the relationship between faith and culture, i.e., the way in which cultural presuppositions, values, and norms condition action and thus Christian faith as praxis. The central argument is that these influences are to some extent determined by the culture of economism and that their conditioning of action thus represents an interpretation of Paul's dilemma in Romans 7:14-25, which is relevant to our own historical and cultural situation. The relationship between faith and culture can therefore be seen as a theory/praxis dialectic operating both at the level of disciplinary reflection and at the level of lived faith.
