

Feminist Perspectives on Argumentation

First published Thu Feb 15, 2021

The noun "argument" and verb "to argue" can describe various things in ordinary language and in different academic disciplines (O'Keefe 1982; Wenzel 1980 [1992]). "Argument" may identify a logical premise-conclusion complex, a speech act, or a dialogical exchange. Arguments may play off other arguments or support each other; smaller arguments can serve as sub-arguments inside larger arguments to which they contribute. Following the practice of Anglophone philosophers, this entry uses the term "argument" only to indicate a premise-conclusion complex that may involve sub-arguments. "Argumentation" also includes the larger context belonging to the activity of "arguing", understood as the offering of reasons.

Feminist philosophical work on argumentation takes a number of different directions. Some feminists note a general association of arguing with aggression, competition, and masculinity, and they question the necessity of these connections. Also, because many view arguing as a central method of philosophical reasoning, if arguing involves gendered assumptions and standards then that would pose special problems for the discipline. In particular, the goal of winning might get in the way of the other purposes for arguing. So, some feminists ask: Can allegedly "feminine" modes of arguing provide an alternative or supplement to allegedly "masculine" modes? Can overarching epistemological standards account for the benefits of different approaches to arguing? These are some of the prospects for argumentation inside and outside of philosophy that feminists consider.

Some feminists charge, moreover, that the academic study of argumentation—by philosophers and other scholars—has failed to account for the type of reasoning required to provide social justice. Ordinary politeness or even a more robust conception of civility can be inadequate to counteract the influence on argumentation of inequalities based on social identity. What resources can informal logic and interdisciplinary argumentation studies provide to help arguing practices avoid the reinforcement of social injustices? Are informal logic and the study of rhetoric any more helpful than deductive logic? Feminist scholars suggest certain strategies for reasoning and for argument pedagogy, especially looking at ways to address the personal nature that arguing often has.

Other feminists find problems with argumentation standards fairly specific to the discipline of philosophy. It emerges that philosophers often invoke claims about arguments and arguing contrary to accepted argumentation scholarship. Feminists especially note this problem in the way that philosophers employ fallacy labels and how they teach argument in critical thinking courses. Even though argumentation scholarship stands in need of further feminist development, it provides some resources to help philosophy better address social justice concerns.

Fundamentals of Argumentation Theory Frans H. van Eemeren,Rob Grootendorst,Ralph H. Johnson,Christian Plantin,Charles A. Willard,2013-11-05 Argumentation theory is a distinctly multidisciplinary field of inquiry It draws its data assumptions and methods from disciplines as disparate as formal logic and discourse analysis linguistics and forensic science philosophy and psychology political science and education sociology and law and rhetoric and artificial intelligence This presents the growing group of interested scholars and students with a problem of access since it is even for those active in the field not common to have acquired a familiarity with relevant aspects of each discipline that enters into this multidisciplinary matrix This book offers its readers a unique comprehensive survey of the various theoretical contributions which have been made to the study of argumentation It discusses the historical works that provide the background to the field and all major approaches and trends in contemporary research Argument has been the subject of systematic inquiry for twenty five hundred years It has been graced with theories such as formal logic or the legal theory of evidence that have acquired a more or less settled provenance with regard to specific issues But there has been nothing to date that qualifies as a unified general theory of argumentation in all its richness and complexity This being so the argumentation theorist must have access to materials and methods that lie beyond his or her home subject It is precisely on this account that this volume is offered to all the constituent research communities and their students Apart from the historical sections each chapter provides an economical introduction to the problems and methods that characterize a given part of the contemporary research program Because the chapters are self contained they can be consulted in the order of a reader's interests or research requirements But there is value in reading the work in its entirety Jointly authored by the very people whose research has done much to define the current state of argumentation theory and to point the way toward more general and unified future treatments this book is an impressively authoritative contribution to the field

Moral Dilemmas Carol Gibb Harding, 1985-01-01 Dilemmas are often thought to be unresolvable situations typically having equally abhorrent alternatives In everyday affairs however one must not only face moral dilemmas but live through them by making moral choices This book is a study of dilemmas choices and the process of reasoning that goes into both Contents Carol Harding The Psychological Reality of Moral Dilemmas Marvin W Berkowitz Four Perspectives on Moral Argumentation Georg Lind Growth and Regression in Cognitive Moral Development of Young University Students Lawrence Kohlberg The Just Community Approach of High School Moral Education Larry P Nucci Children's Conceptions of Morality Societal Convention and Religious Prescription Larry May The Moral Adequacy of Kohlberg's Moral Development Theory Marilyn Friedman Abraham Socrates and Heinz Where Are the Women Care and Context in Moral Reasoning Laurence Hunman The Emotions and the Development of Moral Awareness

Reasonableness and Effectiveness in Argumentative Discourse Frans H. van Eemeren, 2015-08-27 This volume presents 50 contributions on the themes of reasonableness and effectiveness and their connections which are central issues in argumentation theory It discusses van Eemeren's views on the study of argumentation the approach to argumentation adopted in pragma dialectics pragma dialectical perspectives on the dialectical and pragmatic dimensions of argumentative discourse the notion of strategic maneuvering the pragma dialectical method of analyzing argumentative discourse the treatment of fallacies as violations of rules for critical discussion pragma dialectical views on context the role of logic verbal indicators of argumentative moves and argument schemes and the process of writing and rewriting argumentative texts The pragma dialectical quantitative approach to empirical research on argumentative discourse is illustrated by reporting on selected illustrative experimental studies as well as qualitative studies of historical cases      A Systematic Theory of Argumentation Frans H. van Eemeren, Robert Grootendorst, Rob

Grootendorst, 2004 In this book two of the leading figures in argumentation theory present a view of argumentation as a means of resolving differences of opinion by testing the acceptability of the disputed positions Their model of a critical discussion serves as a theoretical tool for analyzing evaluating and producing argumentative discourse This is a major contribution to the study of argumentation and will be of particular value to professionals and graduate students in speech communication informal logic rhetoric critical thinking linguistics and philosophy      Perspectives and Approaches Frans
