

Five Perspectives on Human Development

TABLE 2.4 Five Perspectives on Human Development

Theory	Area of Focus	Fundamental Depiction of What People Do	Relative Emphasis on Nature or Nurture?
Psychoanalytic theory	Psychosexual (Freud) or psychosocial (Erikson) stages	Battle unconscious impulses and overcome major crises	More nature (biological, sexual impulses, and parent-child bonds)
Behaviorism	Conditioning through stimulus and response	Respond to stimuli, reinforcement, and models	More nurture (direct environment produces various behaviors)
Cognitive theory	Thinking, remembering, analyzing	Seek to understand experiences while forming concepts and cognitive strategies	More nature (person's own mental activity and motivation are key)
Sociocultural theory	Social context, expressed through people, language, customs	Learn the tools, skills, and values of society through apprenticeships	More nurture (interaction of mentor and learner, within cultural context)
Universal perspective	Needs and impulses that all humans share as a species	Develop impulses, interests, and patterns to satisfy needs and survive as a species	More nature (needs that apply to all humans; genetic evolution)

Perspectives On Development:

Perspectives on Development Communication K Sadanandan Nair, Shirley A White, 1994-03-02 Nair and White have devised a model best suited for developing countries like India where a unidirectional flow of information has hitherto considerably hindered the development process The papers included in this volume will be useful to students and research scholars particularly in the field of communication The strength of the volume lies in the variety of viewpoints presented from the economic development perspective The Indian Journal of Social Science Current thinking in development communication has shifted from the dominant paradigm of the diffusion of innovation to a less top down approach acknowledging the importance of a micro level focus with coherent linkages to the macro level It is now widely accepted that the development process requires full participation of the people if there is to be a commitment to development decisions development communication can play a decisive role in facilitating this wider involvement The 18 original essays presented in this volume offer diverse viewpoints regarding the need to rethink the effectiveness of existing development models and processes The new model of communication posited by the editors of this book addresses the transition from traditional governance by ascendancy to a more grassroots orientation in development decision making The underlying concern is to reconceptualize development communication Perspectives on Development Communication provides a thoughtful and provocative exposition of both the established and forthcoming approaches

Perspectives on Development P. F. Leeson, Martin Minogue, 1988 Perspectives on Development Studies Karin Fischer, 2007 New Perspectives on Human Development Nancy Budwig, Elliot Turiel, Philip David Zelazo, 2017-04-17 Developmental theorists have struggled with defining the relations among biology psychology and sociocultural context often reducing psychological functions of a person to either biological functioning or the role of sociocultural context nature or nurture and considering each area of human development separately New Perspectives on Human Development addresses fundamental questions of development with a unified approach It encompasses theory and research on cognitive social and moral and language and communicative development in various stages of life and explores interdisciplinary perspectives New Perspectives on Human Development revisits old questions and applies original empirical findings offering new directions for future research in the field

Information Society Karamjit S. Gill, 2012-12-06 Human centredness A Challenge to Post industrial Europe The key power in industrial society has been linked to the possession of capital and factory In the information society it could be rather different If one accepts that that the key power in the information society will be linked not so much to the ownership of information but to human creativity nourished by that information the productive force of today and tomorrow could be more and more the human brain Making use of one's intelligence is always accompanied by positive emotion which in turn further activates the intelligence But unfortunately under present conditions workers of all levels live in fear anxiety and stress rather than desire and motivation The question of basic human ecology quality of life is therefore a major strategic factor It is precisely the opposite to the mechanisms of exclusion that currently dominate our society exclusion of young people through joblessness but also exclusion through technology as with the helplessness of older people or the poorly educated confronted with ticket dispensing machines or other automats This is not idle theorizing it corresponds to concrete facts It is for example how some observers interpret the crisis at IBM Because its programs were less human friendly it was shaken to its foundations by Apple and Microsoft though it seems since to have learnt its lesson

Developmental Perspectives on Child Maltreatment

Ross Rizley, Dante Cicchetti, 1981

Self-Perspectives across the Life Span Richard P. Lipka, Thomas M.

Brinthaup, 1992-07-01 When and how is the self acquired and what characterizes its development and change over the life span What are the implications of using different methodologies to study the self with different age groups This book addresses these and related questions The authors offer research on early and middle childhood late childhood and adolescence and adulthood and old age Among the issues considered are the relationship between cognitive complexity and self evaluation in childhood the pivotal socio emotional tasks that confront the adolescent and effects of situational and structural factors on the self esteem of adolescents and adults and age and gender differences in the ideal and undesired selves of young and older adults These contributions illustrate the different theoretical and methodological issues that are associated with differing stages of the life span and provide a summary of the current knowledge base of the self across the life span Unlike previous books on study of the self this one provides a systematic analysis of the theoretical and methodological issues and a selection of several alternative methodologies for studying the self across the life span

Freedom from poverty as a human right: economic perspectives Andreassen, Bard A., Marks, Stephen P., Sengupta,

Arjun, 2010-06-04

Democracy, Inequality, and Representation in Comparative Perspective Pablo

Beramendi, Christopher J. Anderson, 2008-09-04 The gap between the richest and poorest Americans has grown steadily over the last thirty years and economic inequality is on the rise in many other industrialized democracies as well But the magnitude and pace of the increase differs dramatically across nations A country's political system and its institutions play a critical role in determining levels of inequality in a society Democracy Inequality and Representation argues that the reverse is also true inequality itself shapes political systems and institutions in powerful and often overlooked ways In Democracy Inequality and Representation distinguished political scientists and economists use a set of international databases to examine the political causes and consequences of income inequality The volume opens with an examination of how differing systems of political representation contribute to cross national variations in levels of inequality Torben Iversen and David Soskice calculate that taxes and income transfers help reduce the poverty rate in Sweden by over 80 percent while the comparable figure for the United States is only 13 percent Noting that traditional economic models fail to account for this striking discrepancy the authors show how variations in electoral systems lead to very different outcomes But political causes of disparity are only one part of the equation The contributors also examine how inequality shapes the democratic process Pablo Beramendi and Christopher Anderson show how disparity mutes political voices at the individual level citizens with the lowest incomes are the least likely to vote while high levels of inequality in a society result in diminished electoral participation overall Thomas Cusack Iversen and Philipp Rehm demonstrate that uncertainty in the economy changes voters attitudes the mere risk of losing one's job generates increased popular demand for income support policies almost as much as actual unemployment does Ronald Rogowski and Duncan McRae illustrate how changes in levels of inequality can drive reforms in political institutions themselves Increased demand for female labor participation during World War II led to greater equality between men and women which in turn encouraged many European countries to extend voting rights to women for the first time The contributors to this important new volume skillfully disentangle a series of complex relationships between economics and politics to show how inequality both shapes and is shaped by policy Democracy Inequality and Representation provides deeply nuanced insight into why some democracies are able to curtail inequality while others continue to witness a division that grows ever deeper

Taking Stock Francis T. Cullen, John Paul Wright, Kristie R. Blevins, 2008-12-01 Criminology is in a period of much theoretical ferment Older theories have been revitalized and newer theories have been set forth The very richness of our thinking about crime however leads to questions about the relative merits of these competing paradigms Accordingly in this volume advocates of prominent theories are asked to take stock of their perspectives Their challenge is to assess the empirical status of their theory and to map out future directions for theoretical development The volume begins with an assessment of three perspectives that have long been at the core of criminology social learning theory control theory and strain theory Drawing on these traditions two major contemporary macro level theories of crime have emerged and are here reviewed institutional anomie theory and collective efficacy theory Critical criminology has yielded diverse contributions discussed in essays on feminist theories radical criminology peacemaking criminology and the effects of racial segregation The volume includes chapters examining Moffitt's insights on life course persistent adolescent limited anti social behavior and Sampson and Laub's life course theory of crime In addition David Farrington provides a comprehensive assessment of the adequacy of the leading developmental and life course theories of crime Finally Taking Stock presents essays that review the status of perspectives that have direct implications for the use of criminological knowledge to control crime Taken together these chapters provide a comprehensive update of the field's leading theories of crime. The volume will be of interest to criminological scholars and will be ideal for classroom use in courses reviewing contemporary theories of criminal behavior.

Education for Sustainability through Internationalisation Neera Handa, 2018-08-20 This book suggests how the internationalisation of teaching and learning for sustainability can be a vehicle for a two-way flow of knowledge across national, cultural, and theoretical boundaries. Establishing links between the internationalisation of education and the ideal of global sustainability, the author presents innovative alternative solutions to address the pressing social, environmental, and ethical problems of our age, a global priority demanding an educational response. By engaging with the Hindi concept of tri vid, the three-in-one unification of knowledge, the author reassesses the very nature of knowledge through the intellectual agency of both students and educators. Once opportunities for alternatives not available in dominant Western knowledge traditions are recognised, the development of an innovative alternative perspective becomes possible. This pioneering book will be of interest to students and scholars of international education, sustainability education, and globalisation.

Minerals Yearbook, 1999 Class and Community in Frontier Colorado Richard Hogan, 1990 A significant contribution to historical sociology that shows how economic class relations within frontier communities determined the shape of the political system.

Scott G McNall Early Childhood Education Moncrieff Cochran, Rebecca S. New, 2007-01-30 Early childhood education has reached a level of unprecedented national and international focus. Parents, policy makers, and politicians have opinions as well as new questions about what, how, when, and where young children should learn. Teachers and program administrators now find curriculum discussions linked to dramatic new understandings about children's early learning and brain development. Early childhood education is also a major topic of concern internationally as social policy analysts point to its role in a nation's future economic outlook. As a groundbreaking contribution to its field, this four-volume handbook discusses key historical and contemporary issues, research, theoretical perspectives, national policies, and practices.

Handbook of Race, Racism, and the Developing Child Stephen M. Quintana, Clark McKown, 2008-07-10 Filling a critical void in the literature, Race, Racism, and the Developing Child provides an important source of information for researchers, psychologists, and students on the recent advances in the unique developmental and social features of race and racism in children's lives. Thorough and accessible, this timely reference draws on an international collection of experts and scholars representing the breadth of perspectives, theoretical traditions, and empirical approaches in this field.
