Philosophy and Technology II Carl Mitcham,Alois Huning,2012-12-06 Until recently the philosophy and history of science proceeded in a separate way from the philosophy and history of technology and indeed with respect to both science and technology philosophical and historical inquiries were also following their separate ways Now we see in the past quarter century how the philosophy of science has been profoundly influenced by historical studies of the sciences and no longer concerned so single mindedly with the analysis of theory and explanation with the relation between hypotheses and experimental observation Now also we see the traditional historical studies of technology supplemented by philosophical questions and no longer so plainly focussed upon contexts of application on invention and practical engineering and on the mutually stimulating relations between technology and society Further alas the neat division of intellectual labor those clearly drawn distinctions between science and technology between the theoretical and the applied between discovery and justification between internalist and externalist approaches all have become muddled Partly this is due to internal revolutions within the philosophy and history of science the first result being recognition of their mutual relevance Partly however this state of muddle is due to external factors science at the least in the last half century has become so intimately connected with technology and technological developments have created so many new fields of scientific and philosophical inquiry that any critical reflection on scientific and technological endeavors must henceforth take their interaction into account

Third Revolution in Indian Perspective V. S. Gupta,1995 Perspectives on

Mind H.R. Otto,J. Tuedio,2012-12-06 Phenomenology and analytic philosophy have skirmished often but seldom in ways conducive to dialectical progress Generally the skirmishes seem more political than philosophical as when one side ridicules the methods of the other or criticizes the viability of the other s issues and assumptions Analytic interest in third person objectivity is often spurned by Continental philosophers as being unduly abstract Continental interest in first person subjectivity is often criticized by analysts as being muddled and imprecise Logical analysis confronts the power of metaphor and judges it too ambiguous for rigorous philosophical activity The language of metaphor confronts the power of logical analysis and deems it too restrictive for describing the nature and structures of authentic human experience But are the two approaches really incompatible Perhaps because each side of the divide has been working at problems largely uninteresting to the opposition it has been easy to ignore or underestimate the importance of this issue But now each side is being led into a common field of problems associated with the nature of mind and there is a new urgency to the need for examining carefully the question of conceptual compatibility and the potential for dialogue Analytic thinkers are typically in the business of concept clarification and objective certification Continental philosophers employ introspection in the interest of a project of description and classification that aims to be true to the full subtlety and complexity of the human condition
