V. Sreekantan, 2013-12-31 Consciousness as a Scientific Concept Elizabeth Irvine, 2012-10-13 The source of endless speculation and public curiosity our scientific quest for the origins of human consciousness has expanded along with the technical capabilities of science itself and remains one of the key topics able to fire public as much as academic interest Yet many problematic issues identified in this important new book remain unresolved Focusing on a series of methodological difficulties swirling around consciousness research the contributors to this volume suggest that consciousness is in fact not a wholly viable scientific concept Supporting this eliminativist stance are assessments of the current theories and methods of consciousness science in their own terms as well as applications of good scientific practice criteria from the philosophy of science For example the work identifies the central problem of the misuse of qualitative difference and dissociation paradigms often deployed to identify measures of consciousness It also examines the difficulties that attend the wide range of experimental protocols used to operationalise consciousness and the implications this has on the findings of integrative approaches across behavioural and neurophysiological research The work also explores the significant mismatch between the common intuitions about the content of consciousness that motivate much of the current science and the actual properties of the neural processes underlying sensory and cognitive phenomena Even as it makes the negative eliminativist case the strong empirical grounding in this volume also allows positive characterisations to be made about the products of the current science of consciousness facilitating a re identification of target phenomena and valid research questions for the mind sciences Perspectives on Consciousness Amita Chatterjee, 2003-01-01 Consciousness has remained an enigma even after close scientific scrutiny The Agency and Consciousness in Discourse Paul Thibault, 2004-12-01 In the past two decades there has been considerable interest in the ways in which subjects are positioned in discursive practice This interest has entailed a focus on the role of language and discourse in the processes in and through which subjects are constituted in discourse However questions of agency and how it relates to consciousness have received less attention This book explores the ways in which agency and consciousness are created through transactions between self and other The book argues that it is necessary to regard body brain interactions in the context of the social and discursive practices which act upon human bodies These issues of agency and individuation are explored in relation to infant semiosis as well as in relation to children's symbolic play Thibault looks at the importance of the self-referential moral conscience in relation to the interpersonal dimension of all acts of meaning-making This conscience is also connected to the development of a self-referential viewpoint which the book argues is connected to the ecosocial semiotic systems of thinking about consciousness as a complex system operating on many different levels The author discusses and evaluates the work of linguists psychologists biologists semioticians and sociologists such as Basil Bernstein Mikhail Bakhtin J J Gibson M A K Halliday Walter Kauffman Lakoff Johnson Jay Lemke Jean Piaget and Stanley Salthe to develop a new theory of agency and consciousness
