Pesticides And Groundwater Quality Issues And Problems In 4 States:

Pesticides and Groundwater Quality National Research Council, Board on Agriculture, Patrick W. Holden, 1986-02-01
Pesticides in groundwater can contaminate drinking water and threaten the health of communities How does this contamination occur and what should be done about this pressing problem This new book uses a case study approach to describe the discovery of the problem in four major agricultural states to summarize the most recent data on the problem and to review the status of the problem from both technological and policy perspectives It also addresses the controversial questions of what levels of residues are acceptable who should bear the costs of drinking water that is already contaminated and how federal scientific resources can best be used to aid state initiatives in addressing this problem Pesticides and Groundwater Quality Patrick W. Holden, Board on Agriculture, 1986-01-15 Abstract This book is a resource for scientists policy makers farmers and other pesticide users interested in the relationship of agriculture especially pesticide use to groundwater quality It contains quantitative data and personal views of experts four state California New York Wisconsin and Florida case studies summaries of federal agency and private industry activities and reviews relevant to scientific technological managerial and regulatory concerns It emphasizes ways to mitigate pesticide groundwater quality problems

Pesticides and Groundwater Quality Patrick W. Holden, 1986-01-01 Agrochemical Environmental Fate State of the Art Marguerite L. Leng, Elizabeth M.K. Leovey, Paul L. Zubkoff, 1995-04-28 Accurate risk assessment is critical to pesticide regulation This authoritative reference provides an exhaustive evaluation of current agrochemical environmental fate studies a critical review of current EPA pesticide assessment guidelines and a wide variety of environmental simulation models Divided into four sections this well organized book provides a wealth of data and information vital to anyone involved in environmental exposure assessment groundwater surface water and water contamination pesticide regulation and environmental simulation modeling At your fingertips you will have the latest information on the development of meaningful environmental fate data and how this information will result in accurate assessment of potential environmental and human hazards The inadequacy of current regulatory guidelines and the resulting nonscientific assessment of agrochemical environmental fate are discussed in detail A wide variety of environmental fate studies are included to demonstrate the current use of data to assess environmental fate and potential hazards associated with agrochemical use Finally ten chapters discuss the use of computer models that have been developed for analyzing and integrating data from a variety of environmental fate studies on agrochemicals used under various field conditions Commodity and Resource Policies in Agricultural Systems Richard E. Just, Nancy Bockstael, 2012-12-06 Agricultural natural resource and environmental problems are becoming increasingly interdependent For example soil erosion is largely determined by agricultural land use Both water use and water contamination depend on land use and technology choice in agriculture In many areas the fertilizers and pesticides used in agriculture are major pollutants of ground and surface water having adverse effects on drinking water and fisheries Agricultural pollutants such as pesticides also produce adverse health effects for agricultural workers and the consuming public On the other hand the availability of water resources and the value of competing land uses influence agricultural production Additionally regional air quality problems may affect crops and global environmental trends may have long term implications for farming Agriculture natural resources and environmental quality are all heavily regulated in the U S but they are done so by a vast array of competing or unrelated agencies within the U S Departments of Agriculture Interior and Commerce the Environmental Protection Agency and numerous state agencies Considering the large number of bureaucratically remote public agencies involved and the pervasive interdependencies between agriculture natural resources and the environment policies develop which are at best uncoordinated and at worst conflicting and counterproductive These policies have become sources of controversy as different interest groups struggle to affect their implementation as different agencies have fought for administrative control and as legislative bodies have attempted to enact piecemeal changes

Pesticide Profiles Michael A. Kamrin, 1997-03-12 Pesticide Profiles Toxicity Environmental Impact and Fate is like three books in one it is a profile containing specific information about 137 pesticides a primer of environmental toxicology and an extensive trade name index Profiles of each pesticide contain regulatory information toxicity assessments environmental fate data physical properties and acceptable exposure limit values What these values and data mean in terms of human toxicity is clearly interpreted as well The book also describes the meaning of carcinogenicity and how it is assessed in non technical terms the non expert can understand Readers with a technical background are provided with the data to make their own judgments In addition to information about specific pesticides there are sections on general classes of pesticides such as organophosphates This information allows readers to make inferences about any pesticide in a class even if a profile is not provided Pesticide Profiles Toxicity Environmental Impact and Fate goes beyond the usual listings of toxicity values or environmental half lives to offer a broad understanding to readers of various backgrounds and interests
