Risk, Disaster and Crisis Reduction Valerie November,Yvan Leanza,2014-10-06 In the field of risks and crises both the access to relevant information and its circulation are seen as crucial factors Based on a new integrated theoretical model focusing on the stakeholder the book proposes analysis of information reformulation and circulation in risk environments and crisis situations Simply circulating the information does not mean that it will be picked up by those who could benefit from it This has been amply demonstrated by the various crises and catastrophes that have shaken the planet in recent years In order to be able to deal with risk situations and crises it must be possible for information when it circulates to be understood and interpreted by a wide range of stakeholders working in fields such as health and natural or environmental risks By observing closely in three very different situations the way in which information is gathered processed distributed and used this book examines the countless reformulations redefinitions and even reorientations to which all information is subjected This multiple reformatting at least according to the hypothesis put forward in this book is an important element in ensuring that the information produced circulates and reaches those for whom it is intended The intention is then to analyze the way in which information circulates in situations of risk and crisis In order to do it the authors propose a new theoretical model based on different approaches This model is anchored in the trend of research that has been oriented towards a wider understanding of risks and their territorial and social consequences These ideas question the approach to risk which focuses primarily on technical aspects and probability The model also draws from approaches to risk that focus on the stakeholders involved in the debates and the need for an integrated vision of risks Risks are thus considered heterogeneous plural and transcalar The information flow about risks was studied first in the SHOC Room of the World Health Organization WHO in Geneva a central place through which passes all information destined to managing world wide epidemic risks Then the research team monitored the constitution and the reception of a field library about risks management and reduction sent to Madagascar an island systematically hit by cyclones This following process has permitted the analysis of information dissemination during a crisis situation The third field work was done in Cameroun to observe the use and transmission of information in two NGO specializing in sanitary risks prevention using traditional and biomedical conceptualization of health and illness The book ends with a practical tool to assess and help the information circulation in risk and crisis situations

Disaster Management SULPHEY, M. M., 2016-03-14

Regular famines frequent earthquakes repeated floods and similar natural calamities have always threatened human lives on earth. These environmental turbulences in the recent times have increased manifolds and the repercussions are felt day in and out. Uttarakhand was totally washed down by the 2014 Floods. Kathmandu got devastated by the 2015 Earthquake and the list is endless. These increasing threats posed by the recurring natural disasters have made disaster management a prerequisite. This book provides various dimensions of Disaster Management: causes of disasters, both natural and manmade threats posed, and the ways of managing the same. Divided into 28 chapters and organized into three parts, the book elaborately explains the concepts with suitable examples. Part I on Systems of Earth introduces the readers to the various aspects of earth that could cause disasters. Part II on Disasters deals in detail with the various causes and dimensions of disasters. Part III on Disaster Management provides the reader with various disaster management techniques and frameworks to mitigate the consequences of a disaster. The book is suitable for the undergraduate and postgraduate students of Geography and also postgraduate students of Management. Moreover, the book can also be suitable for the students of Environmental Engineering.

Comprehensive analysis of the disaster risk reduction system for the agriculture sector in Turkmenistan FAO, 2024-09-12. This report aims to highlight the current strengths of the institutional DRR system for agriculture in Turkmenistan as well as indicate existing gaps and capacity needs to further enhance it. A comprehensive assessment is conducted which includes a general overview of the country's agricultural sector and outlines the most frequent natural hazards that are impacting the sector. It is followed by an analysis of the existing legal policy and institutional structure and discusses various components of the system including e.g. the functioning of early warning systems, assessments of disaster risks, post-disaster needs assessments including damages and losses assessments, and the availability of agricultural insurance for farmers. It concludes by providing recommendations for capacity building interventions to strengthen the current system to reduce the adverse impacts of natural hazards, in particular floods, landslides, and droughts, and climate change on agriculture in Turkmenistan.

Early Warning Alert and Response in Emergencies World Health Organization, 2023-01-27. Of Divine Warning Jane Anna Gordon, Lewis R. Gordon, 2015-11-17. This book offers a theory of disaster in modern and contemporary society and its impact on the construction of social and political life. The theory is premised upon what the authors call the sign continuum where disaster spreads across society through efforts to evade social responsibility for its causes and consequences. Phenomena generated by such efforts include the social manifestation of monstrosity, disastrous people, and other forms of living things, and an emerging antipolitics in an effort to assert rule and order. A crucial development is the attack on speech, a fundamental feature of political life as manifested by the increased expectations of categories of people whose containment calls for shunning and silence.
