Professional Domesticity In The Victorian Novel Women Work And Home:

Professional Domesticity in the Victorian Novel Monica F. Cohen, 1998-02-05 Much attention has recently been given by scholars to the widening of the gender gap in the nineteenth century and the concept of separate spheres Testing such constructions and questioning the stereotypes associated with Victorian domesticity Monica F Cohen offers new readings of narratives by Austen Charlotte Bront Dickens Eliot Eden Gaskell Oliphant and Reade to show how domestic work the most feminine of all activities gained much of its social credibility by positioning itself in relation to the emergent professions By exploring how novels cast the Victorian conception of female morality into the vocabulary of nineteenth century professionalism Cohen traces the ways in which women sought identity and privilege within a professionalised culture and revises our understanding of Victorian domestic ideology

Sensation Novels and Domestic Minds Mathilde Vialard, 2024-02-26 Drawing on the recent academic interest in approaching health and wellbeing from a humanities perspective Sensation Novels and Domestic Minds investigates how the Victorians dealt with questions of mental health by examining literary works in the genre of sensation fiction The novels of Mary Elizabeth Braddon and Wilkie Collins two prominent writers of the genre often portray characters suffering from mental illnesses commonly diagnosed at the time among which are monomania moral insanity melancholia and hypochondria By studying the fictional works of Braddon and Collins alongside medical texts from the nineteenth century it sets out to investigate how these novels fictionally represented real mental sufferings This book considers the different mental illnesses the characters of sensation novels develop inside and outside the home as they struggle to define their own identity against Victorian social expectations It demonstrates how these novels fictionalised the crisis of the leisured upper classes who spent most of their time at home and found themselves at odds with a society that increasingly separated the domestic and working environments while also considering the impact that a lack of a sense of domestic belonging could have on their mental health Sensation Novels and Domestic Minds further analyses the extent to which domesticity in its excess or lack could afflict the mental health of Victorian men and women through the fictional representation of suicidal thoughts and acts in the novels of Braddon and Collins

Inside the Victorian Home Judith Flanders, 2004 A rich selection from diaries letters advice books magazines and paintings creates a rooms by room portrait of Victorian life from childbirth in the master bedroom to separate gender domains in the drawing room and parlor

Servants and Paternalism in the Works of Maria Edgeworth and Elizabeth Gaskell Julie Nash, 2017-11-30 Writing during periods of dramatic social change Maria Edgeworth and Elizabeth Gaskell were both attracted to the idea of radical societal transformation at the same time that their writings express nostalgia for a traditional paternalistic ruling class The author shows how this tension is played out especially through the characters of servants in short fiction and novels such as Edgeworth's Castle Rackrent Belinda and Helen and Gaskell's North and South and Cranford Servant characters the author contends enable these writers to give voice to the contradictions inherent in the popular paternalistic philosophy of their times because the situation of domestic servitude itself embodies such inconsistencies. Servants whose labor was essential to the economic and social function of eighteenth and nineteenth century British society made up the largest category of workers in England by the nineteenth century and yet were expected to be socially invisible. At the same time they lived in the same houses as their masters and mistresses and were privy to the most intimate details of their lives. Both Edgeworth and Gaskell created servant characters who challenge the social hierarchy thus exposing the potential for dehumanization and corruption inherent in the paternalistic philosophy. The author's study opens up important avenues for future scholars of women's fiction in the nineteenth century.

Narrative Hospitality in Late Victorian Fiction Rachel Hollander, 2013-01-17

Bringing together poststructuralist ethical theory with late Victorian debates about the morality of literature, this book reconsiders the ways in which novels engender an ethical orientation or response in their readers, explaining how the intersections of nation, family, and form in the late realist English novel produce a new ethics of hospitality. Hollander reads texts that both portray and enact a unique ethical orientation of welcoming the other: a narrative hospitality that combines the Victorians' commitment to engaging with the real world with a more modern awareness of difference and the limits of knowledge. While classic nineteenth century realism rests on a sympathy-based model of moral relations, novels by authors such as George Eliot, Thomas Hardy, and Olive Schreiner present instead an ethical recognition of the distance between self and other. Opening themselves to the other in their very structure and narrative form, the visited texts both represent and theorize the ethics of hospitality, anticipating twentieth century philosophy's recognition of the limits of sympathy. As colonial conflicts, nationalist anxiety, and the intensification of the woman question became dominant cultural concerns in the 1870s and 80s, the problem of self and other, known and unknown, began to saturate and define the representation of home in the English novel. This book argues that in the wake of an erosion of confidence in the ability to understand that which is unlike the self, a moral code founded on sympathy gave way to an ethics of hospitality in which the concept of home shifts to acknowledge the permeability and vulnerability of not only domestic but also national spaces. Concluding with Virginia Woolf's reexamination of the novel's potential to educate the reader in negotiating relations of alterity in a more fully modernist moment, Hollander suggests that the late Victorian novel embodies a unique and previously unrecognized ethical mode between Victorian realism and a post-World War I ethics of modernist form.

Modernism and the Architecture of Private Life Victoria Rosner, 2005-01-19

Modernism and the Architecture of Private Life offers a bold new assessment of the role of the domestic sphere in modernist literature, architecture, and design. Elegantly synthesizing modernist literature with architectural plans, room designs, and decorative art, Victoria Rosner's work explores the collaborations among modern British writers, interior designers, and architects in redefining the form, function, and meaning of middle class private life. Drawing on a host of previously unexamined archival sources and works by figures such as E. M. Forster, Roger Fry, Oscar Wilde, James McNeill Whistler, and Virginia Woolf, Rosner highlights the participation of modernist literature in the creation of an experimental embodied and unstructured private life which we continue to characterize as modern

Scottish Women's Writing in the Long Nineteenth Century Juliet Shields, 2021-07-29 Walter Scott's tales of chivalry and adventure inaugurated a masculinized Scottish romance tradition that celebrated a sublime and heroic version of Scotland Nineteenth century Scotswomen responded to Scott's influence by establishing a counter tradition of unromantic or even anti romantic representations of Scotland Their novels challenged the long standing claim that Scotland lacked any equivalent to the English realist novel In turning from the past to the present and from the sublimity of Scott's Highland landscapes to farmhouses factories and suburban villas Scottish women writers brought romance to everyday life illuminating the magnificence of the mundane Drawing on the evangelical discourses emerging from the splintering of the Presbyterian Church in 1843 they represented fiction as a form of spiritual comfort an antidote to the dreary monotony and petty frustrations of daily existence This volume introduces the previously overlooked tradition of nineteenth century Scottish women's writing and corrects previously male dominated histories of the Scottish novel
