

Internal Quality Control In Blood Bank Testing

Internal Quality Control (IQC) is the backbone of any quality assurance program. Internal quality control is the set of procedures undertaken by the staff of a laboratory for continuously and concurrently assessing laboratory work and the emergent results, to decide whether they are reliable enough to be released. It is meant to allow laboratory technicians to check their own performance and help them to monitor the reliability of their technique. It maintains day to day working objectively and detects any deviation very early like Drift or trend - Seen when the control value moves progressively in one direction from the mean for a minimum of three (3) days. Suggests that a problem is gradually developing, such as deterioration of a reagent or control.

Dispersion – Increase in Random Errors and Lack of Precision. Suggests inconsistency of technique or fluctuations in instrumentation function.

Shift – Abrupt changes observed when a problem develops suddenly. May be due to instrument malfunction or an error in technique.

QUALITY MANAGEMENT in blood transfusion service is concerned with every aspect of transfusion practice and applies to all activities of a blood transfusion service. It involves identification and election of prospective blood donors, adequate collection of blood, preparation of blood components, quality laboratory testing and ensuring the safest and most appropriate use of blood components.

When testing of blood & its components is performed, test may either be classified as:

QUANTITATIVE: Measures the amount of substance present like in TTD (ELISA, LUMINESCENCE), Final products and Donor selection parameters.

QUALITATIVE: Determines whether the substance being tested is present or absent like in Blood grouping, rapid card tests etc. Internal quality control programme try to make things more objective than subjective and to reduce interpersonal or inter organization errors/differences.

Smit Sibinga, P.C. Das, H.F. Taswell, 2012-12-06 THE PHILOSOPHY OF QUALITY ASSURANCE IN THE BLOOD BANK H F Taswell One year before this symposium Cees Smit Sibinga and I began to discuss an approach to quality assurance in the blood bank which we felt would be both important and practical and could serve as the basis for the choice of subjects to be presented in the symposium As an introduction to this book I would like to outline our approach the subjects chosen and the rationale behind our choice What is the fundamental purpose of a blood bank and trans fusion service Simply stated the purpose of a blood bank and transfusion service and of a quality assurance program in blood banking is for the one to provide and the other to assure safe and effective transfusion therapy This objective is in contrast to that of other clinical laboratories The objective in a clinical chemistry laboratory is to produce accurate test results which will be meaningful to the clinician taking care of his patient In most clinical laboratories therefore the goals of a quality assurance program are largely quantitative that is to assure accurate numerical test results In contrast in the blood bank the goals of quality assurance are primarily qualitative that is to assure safe and effective transfusion As a result two somewhat different approaches to quality assurance are necessary
