ALTHOUGH it was springtide by the calendar and already some little way advanced the snow time was by no means over in that wild Border country The exact date was April 19 I fix it by the fact that my birthday falls on the 18th and that I spent that one the twenty third in an old fashioned hotel at Wooler and celebrated it by treating myself at dinner to the best bottle of wine the house afforded It may have been the bottle of wine but more likely it was sheer ignorance and presumption that prompted me next morning to attempt what proved to be an impossible feat of pedestrianism I set out immediately after breakfast intending before nightfall to make a complete circuit of the country which lies between Wooler and the Scottish border going round by Kirknewton Coldburn and the Cheviot and getting back to my starting point by Hedgehope Hill and Kelpie Strand That would have been a big walk on a long and fair summer day in the uncertainty of a northern April it was a rash venture which landed me in a highly unpleasant situation before the close of the afternoon The morning was bright and promising and for many enjoyable hours all went well But about three o'clock came a disappearance of the sun and a suspicious darkening of the sky and lowering of temperature before long snow began to fall and in a fashion with which I a Southerner was not at all familiar It was thick it was blinding it was persistent it speedily obscured tracks and heaped itself up in hollows I began to have visions of being lost in it And between five and six o'clock I found myself in this position as far as I could make out from my pocket map I was at some point of the Angle between the Cheviot Cairn Hill and Hedgehope Hill and at the western extremity of Harthope Burn but for all practical purposes I might as well have been in the heart of the Andes I could just make out the presence of the three great hills but I could see nothing of any farmstead or dwelling what was worse no house wayside inn or village was marked on my map that is within any reasonable distance As for a path I had already lost the one I was on and the snow by that time had become a smooth thick white carpet in front of me I might be safe in stepping farther on that carpet and I might sink into a hole or bog and be unable to get out And the nearest indicated place Middleton was miles and miles away and darkness was coming and coming quickly The exact spot in which I made these rough reckonings was at the lee side of a coppice of young fir whereat I had paused to rest a while and to consider what was best to be done Clearly there was only one thing to do to struggle on and trust to luck I prepared for that by taking a pull at my flask in which fortunately there was still half its original contents of whisky and water left and finishing the remains of my lunch But the prospect that faced me when I presently left my shelter and rounded the corner of the coppice was by no means pleasant The snow was falling faster and thicker and darkness was surely coming It looked as if I was either to struggle through the snow for more miles than I knew of or be condemned to creep under any shelter I could find and pass a miserable night But even then my bad luck was on the turn Going onward and downward from off the moorland towards the valley I suddenly realised that I had struck some sort of road or made track it was hard and wide as I ascertained by striking my stick through the snow at various places And just as suddenly a little way farther to the east I saw bright and beckoning the lights of a house
