Apples and Oranges Bruce Lincoln, 2018-08-22 Comparison is an indispensable intellectual operation that plays a crucial role in the formation of knowledge Yet comparison often leads us to forego attention to nuance detail and context perhaps leaving us bereft of an ethical obligation to take things correspondingly as they are Examining the practice of comparison across the study of history language religion and culture distinguished scholar of religion Bruce Lincoln argues in Apples and Oranges for a comparatism of a more modest sort Lincoln presents critiques of recent attempts at grand comparison and enlists numerous theoretical examples of how a more modest cautious and discriminating form of comparison might work and what it can accomplish He does this through studies of shamans werewolves human sacrifices apocalyptic prophecies sacred kings and surveys of materials as diverse and wide ranging as Beowulf Herodotus's account of the Scythians the Native American Ghost Dance and the Spanish Civil War Ultimately Lincoln argues that concentrating one's focus on a relatively small number of items that the researcher can compare closely offering equal attention to relations of similarity and difference not only grants dignity to all parties considered it yields more reliable and more interesting if less grandiose results Giving equal attention to the social historical and political contexts and subtexts of religious and literary texts also allows scholars not just to assess their content but also to understand the forces problems and circumstances that motivated and shaped them

Central Sites, Peripheral Visions Richard Handler, 2006-11-08 The terms center and periphery are particularly relevant to anthropologists since traditionally they look outward from institutional centers universities museums government bureaus to learn about people on the peripheries Yet anthropology itself as compared with economics politics or history occupies a space somewhat on the margins of academe Still anthropologists who control esoteric knowledge about the vast range of human variation often find themselves in a theoretically central position able to critique the universal truths promoted by other disciplines Central Sites Peripheral Visions presents five case studies that explore the dilemmas moral as well as political that emerge out of this unique position From David Koester's analysis of how ethnographic descriptions of Iceland marginalized that country's population to Kath Weston's account of an offshore penal colony where officials mixed prison work with ethnographic pursuits from Brad Evans's reflections on the bohemianism of both the Harlem vogue and American anthropology to Arthur J Ray's study of anthropologists who serve as expert witnesses in legal cases the essays in the eleventh volume of the History of Anthropology Series reflect on anthropology's always problematic status as centrally peripheral or peripherally central Finally George W Stocking Jr in a contribution that is almost a book in its own right traces the professional trajectory of American anthropologist Robert Gelston Armstrong who was unceremoniously expelled from his place of privilege because of his communist sympathies in the 1950s By taking up Armstrong's unfinished business decades later Stocking engages in an extended meditation on the relationship between center and periphery and offers a kind of posthumous reparation a page in the history of the discipline for a distant colleague who might otherwise have remained in the footnotes
