We Are an African People Russell Rickford, 2016-01-14 During the height of the Black Power movement of the late 1960s and 1970s dozens of Pan African nationalist private schools from preschools to post secondary ventures appeared in urban settings across the United States The small independent enterprises were often accused of teaching hate and were routinely harassed by authorities Yet these institutions served as critical mechanisms for transmitting black consciousness Founded by activist intellectuals and other radicalized veterans of the civil rights movement the schools strove not simply to bolster the academic skills and self esteem of inner city African American youth but also to decolonize minds and foster a vigorous and regenerative sense of African identity In We Are An African People historian Russell Rickford traces the intellectual lives of these autonomous black institutions established dedicated to pursuing the self determination that the integrationist civil rights movement had failed to provide Influenced by Third World theorists and anticolonial campaigns organizers of the schools saw formal education as a means of creating a vanguard of young activists devoted to the struggle for black political sovereignty throughout the world Most of the institutions were short lived and they offered only modest numbers of children a genuine alternative to substandard inner city public schools Yet their stories reveal much about Pan Africanism as a social and intellectual movement and as a key part of an indigenous black nationalism Rickford uses this largely forgotten movement to explore a particularly fertile period of political cultural and social revitalization that strove to revolutionize African American life and envision an alternate society Reframing the post civil rights era as a period of innovative organizing he depicts the prelude to the modern Afrocentric movement and contributes to the ongoing conversation about urban educational reform race and identity
