Gregory Mott is seen at first solely through the eyes of other people: the old man who taught him when he was a child; his aristocratic wife; his oldest friend Lambert Corry; and Harriet Ellis at one time his mistress and still his close friend. He is a religious man, a writer whose Anglican beliefs have had considerable influence. For the past ten years he has been a successful Director of the Rutley Institute of Arts. What man could be happier or more secure? But suppose such a man makes an error, social or moral, and makes the further blunder of denying it. During a journey abroad this happens. Afterwards in London truth eats its way into his life through the defences of fear, vanity, self-deception, egoism. Friends and his religious assurance itself fail him, and step by step he is driven to look at himself in the clearest bearable light. The other man, Lambert Corry, makes no errors. And though at one moment he runs some risk of recognising himself, his prudence and agility save him from this danger. Apart from the journey through France and the scene in a pilgrimage village in Switzerland, the action takes place in London, much of it in Mott's house on the north side of Hyde Park. The view from this house, seen at different times of day or night at different seasons, forms the background for a novel which is both a social comedy and the account of one man's unwilling discovery of himself. Proceedings of the 9th International Congress on Deterioration and Conservation of Stone V. Fassina, 2000-06-13 The conservation of historic monuments, sites and structures constitutes an inter-professional discipline co-ordinating a range of aesthetic, historic, scientific and technical methods. Conservation is a rapidly developing field which by its true nature is a multidisciplinary activity with experts respecting one another's contributions and combining to form an effective team. Conservation is an artistic activity aided by scientific and historical knowledge. Main topics at this Congress included: the most appropriate methodology for the assessment of the degree of weathering of stone; development of new methods and instruments for the diagnosis of the state of conservation; for the study of alteration mechanisms; and for conservation treatments; the definition of Technical European Standard Methods for the evaluation of conservation treatments of artistic and historic stone objects and monuments. AD 600-1200, Bihar and Bengal, poly-religiosity was generally the norm rather than an exception, which entailed the evolution of complex patterns of inter-religious equations. Buddhism, Brahmanism and Jainism not only coexisted but also competed for social patronage, forcing them to enter into complex interactions with social institutions and processes. Through an analysis of the published archaeological data, this work explores some aspects of the social history of Buddhist, Brahmanical and Jain temples and shrines and Buddhist stupas and monasteries in early medieval Bihar and Bengal. This archaeological history of religions questions many established textual reconstructions and enriches our understanding of the complex issue of the decline of Buddhism in this area.
