Sanitation Programmes Revisited:

Sanitation Programmes Revisited Darren Saywell, 2000-01-15 This WELL study Task 161 involved the review of two notable sanitation programmes the Strategic Sanitation Plan Kumasi Ghana and the National Low Cost Sanitation Programme Mozambique with a view to identifying where and why they had failed or succeeded some years after implementation The reports provides an historical review understanding of critical issues and a comparative analysis of the two programmes with a view to drawing out common and contrasting approaches and lessons learned Integrated Water Resources Management in the 21st Century: Revisiting the paradigm Pedro Martinez-Santos, Maite M. Aldaya, M. Ramón Llamas, 2014-03-03 Integrated water resources management advocates a coordinated approach for managing water resources in a way that balances social and economic needs with concern for the environment While potentially useful integrated water management is also controversial Supporters believe that the multi dimensional nature of water can only be understood and managed Revisiting Targeting in Social Assistance Margaret Grosh, Phillippe Leite, Matthew Wai-Poi, Emil Tesliuc, 2022-06-02 Targeting is a commonly used but much debated policy tool within global social assistance practice Revisiting Targeting in Social Assistance A New Look at Old Dilemmas examines the well known dilemmas in light of the growing body of experience new implementation capacities and the potential to bring new data and data science to bear The book begins by considering why or whether or how narrowly or broadly to target different parts of social assistance and updates the global empirics around the outcomes and costs of targeting It illustrates the choices that must be made in moving from an abstract vision to implementable definitions and procedures and in deciding how the choices should be informed by values empirics and context The importance of delivery systems and processes to distributional outcomes are emphasized and many facets with room for improvement are discussed The book also explores the choices between targeting methods and how differences in purposes and contexts shape those The know how with respect to the data and inference used by the different household specific targeting methods is summarized and comprehensively updated including a focus on big data and machine learning A primer on measurement issues is included Key findings include the following Targeting selected categories families or individuals plays a valuable role within the framework of universal social protection Measuring the accuracy and cost of targeting can be done in many ways and judicious choices require a range of metrics Weighing the relatively low costs of targeting against the potential gains is important Implementing inclusive delivery systems is critical for reducing errors of exclusion and inclusion Selecting and customizing the appropriate targeting method depends on purpose and context there is no method preferred in all circumstances Leveraging advances in technology ICT big data artificial intelligence machine learning can improve targeting accuracy but they are not a panacea better data matters more than sophistication in inference Targeting social protection should be a dynamic process REVISITING INDIA'S PAST Prof. P. Recycling Reconsidered Samantha Macbride, 2013-08-16 How the success and popularity of recycling has diverted attention from the steep environmental costs of manufacturing the goods we consume and discard Recycling is widely celebrated as an environmental success story The accomplishments of the recycling movement can be seen in municipal practice a thriving private recycling industry and widespread public support and participation In the United States more people recycle than vote But as Samantha MacBride points out in this book the goals of recycling saving the earth and trees conserving resources and greening the economy are still far from being realized The vast majority of solid wastes are still burned or buried MacBride argues that since the emergence of the recycling movement in 1970 manufacturers of products that end up in waste have successfully prevented the implementation of more onerous yet far more effective forms of sustainable waste policy Recycling as we know it today generates the illusion of progress while allowing industry to maintain the status quo and place responsibility on consumers and local government MacBride offers a series of case studies in recycling that pose provocative questions about whether the current ways we deal with waste are really the best ways to bring about real sustainability and environmental justice She does not aim to debunk or discourage recycling but to help us think beyond recycling as it is today

Environmental Problems in an Urbanizing World Jorge E. Hardoy, Diana Mitlin, David Satterthwaite, 2013-11-05 New edition of Environmental Problems in Third World Cities Cities in Africa Asia and Latin America contain some of the world's most life and health threatening human environments. Environment related diseases and injuries cause millions of preventable deaths each year. In many squatter settlements children are 40 to 50 times more likely to die before the age of five than they would be in Europe or North America and most such deaths are environment related. Many cities also cause serious environmental degradation to their surroundings and increasingly contribute to global warming. This updated and much expanded edition of the classic Environmental Problems in Third World Cities describes environmental problems and their effect on human health, local ecosystems and global cycles. It points to the political causes that underpin many of these problems including ineffective unaccountable governments and aid agencies reluctance to work with the urban poor. It also highlights innovative solutions such as High quality low cost homes and neighbourhoods developed by urban poor groups working with local non governmental organizations. Local Agenda 21s developed by municipal governments in partnership with community organizations. In their analysis the authors show that cities can meet sustainable development goals. There are practical affordable solutions to their environmental problems but most of these depend on more competent and accountable city governments and on more support for low income households and their organizations. The book also outlines the changes needed international aid agencies to support this. PRAISE FOR THE FIRST EDITION. It's rare to encounter a work as authoritative and accessible as this. It is a mine of useful information from cities in every corner of the Third World which does not shy away from the immensity of the problems but says as much about the solutions to them as about the problems themselves. Jonathon Porritt. Well written and very accessible. The Geographical Journal. Of value to students, teachers, practitioners, policy makers and aid agencies. Third World Planning Review. A valuable resource for understanding the underlying problems, this book offers practical alternatives. Cities International. Wagadu Volume 3. Wagadu, 2007-09-26. The United Nations has proclaimed the 21st century to be the century of water. In this volume Water and Women in Past, Present and Future, scholars analyze the gendered political economy of water resource allocations and importantly offer recommendations for viable women friendly solutions to address scarcity and distribution among other issues. Contributors also explore feminist analyses of the aesthetic dimension of water and the feminine since water is often associated with women shown in cross cultural examples of mythology, symbols and legends. Intersecting the fields of hydro politics and aesthetics, this book should be of interest to policy analysts, activists and academics. Waterlines, 2001.
