Santa Ana Wind:

A Vertical Perspective of Santa Ana Winds in a Canyon Bill C. Ryan, 1969 Some Characteristics of the Three-dimensional Structure of Santa Ana Winds Michael Allen Fosberg, 1966 The Santa Ana Winds of Southern California in the Context of Fire Weather Yang Cao, 2015

The Santa Ana winds represent a high impact weather event owing to the intimate relationship between the extremely dry fast winds and the wildfire threat. The winds can be locally gusty particularly in the complex terrain of San Diego county where the airflow has characteristics of downslope windstorms. These winds can cause and or rapidly spread wildfires the threat of which is particularly acute during the autumn season before the onset of winter rains. It remains a day to day challenge to accurately predict wind gust speed especially in the mountainous regions. Our study employs large physics ensembles composed of high resolution simulations of severe downslope windstorms that involve an exhaustive examination of available model physical parameterizations. Model results are calibrated and validated against the San Diego Gas and Electric SDG&E mesonet observations a dense homogenous and well positioned network with uniform high quality. Results demonstrate model horizontal resolution model physics random perturbations and landuse database can have a material effect on the strength location and timing of Santa Ana winds in real data simulations. A large model physics ensemble reveals the land surface model to be most crucial in skillful wind predictions which are particularly sensitive to the surface roughness length. A surprisingly simple gust parameterization is proposed for the San Diego network based on the discovery that this homogeneous mesonet has a nearly invariant network averaged gust factor. The gust forecast technique is of special interest in the context of routine weather combined with atmospheric humidity and fuel moisture information. A real time wildfire threat warning system the Santa Ana Wildfire Threat Index SAWTI has been developed to effectively communicate the upcoming Santa Ana wind strength with respect to the anticipated fire danger to first responders and the public. In addition to the wind and gust forecast techniques attempts have been made to skillfully model two essential elements that SAWTI is heavily dependent on i.e the live fuel moisture and the greenness using meteorological information. The models developed can skillfully determine these essential elements from both forecast and reanalysis data.

The Santa Ana Wind Terry Elmo Stephenson, 1943 Santa Ana Wind Events in Southern California Rebecca Stedman Rowland, 2011 The Santa Ana Wind Helen Van Slyke, 1983-10-01 Santa Ana Winds of Southern California Janin Guzman Morales, 2018

Santa Ana Winds of Southern California and Northern Baja California SoCal are the primary weather drivers of wildfires that frequently and infamously ravage this topographically and demographically complex region. As the available wind observations are scarce Santa Ana Winds SAWs have not been adequately studied on climate timescales. Yet wildfire behavior has been changing wildly even during my dissertation work. For example the largest wildfire in California's recorded history occurred in December of 2017 well outside the unique fall season for the largest wildfires typical of this region. This dissertation presents results of my efforts to understand Santa Ana wind behavior on climate timescales and in our changing climate In Chapter 1 I developed and analyzed the longest and most complete record of hourly SAWs heretofore available These results provide a robust perspective on both high and low frequency SAW behavior uncovering previously unknown climate influences on SAW activity and laying the groundwork for eventual studies into seasonal SAW predictability Notably the 65 year record of hourly SAWs did not manifest clear long term trends In Chapter 2 using a dynamically downscaled training data set I developed an approach to statistically downscale coarsely resolved winds from a global Reanalysis with spatial resolution typical of global climate models GCMs The result was an efficient and skillful downscaling of coarse daily surface wind vectors onto a fine grid over the SoCal domain spanning 70 years From these daily wind fields I derived SAWs and validated them against my previously validated SAWs derived in Chapter 1 from our dynamical training data set A capacity to statistically downscale daily winds from reanalyses and global climate models was thus developed and applied in Chapter 3 to a set of eight GCMs yielding an ensemble of daily 10X10 km wind data sets covering SoCal and spanning a historical and future projected time period from 1950 to 2100 Analyses of these data yielded physically meaningful robust and clear projections of SAW activity gradually decreasing and constricting around its traditional seasonal peak centered on December These results provide robustness nuance and meteorological context to expectations of future SoCal wildfire activity

The Santa Ana Wind Sharon Ashton,1974 A Study of the Santa Ana Winds of Southern California Carl R. Hamilton,Harold O. Bergman,1948 Meteorology Steven A. Ackerman,John Knox,2012 Written for the undergraduate non majors course the Third Edition engages students with real world examples and a captivating narrative It highlights how we observe the atmosphere and then uses those discoveries to explain atmospheric phenomena Early chapters discuss the primary atmospheric variables involved in the formation of weather pressure temperature moisture clouds and precipitation and include practical information on weather maps and weather observation The remainder of the book focuses on weather and climate topics such as the interaction between atmosphere and ocean severe extreme weather and climate change

Winds Over Wildlands ,1964 Weather: Spaces, Mobilities and Affects Kaya Barry,Maria Borovnik,Tim Edensor,2020-12-17 This book delves into the everyday spaces diverse mobilities and affective potency of weather It presents cutting edge research into the multiplicity of weather phenomena and analyses the lived experiences of humans in conjunction with contemporary issues notably climate change The book considers how everyday experiences of weather in the mundane lives of people are linked to broader changes in weather patterns and climate change Heat dust ice snow precipitation sunlight clouds tides and fog are states of weather that impact on the ways in which humans become intertwined with landscapes Our experiences with weather are diverse and ever changing and engaging with weather entangles humans with mobilities materials and landscapes This book thus explores affective and sensory resonances drawing upon a variety of theoretical empirical and creative material to investigate how weather is perceived in different social and cultural contexts Key themes focus on the mobilities generated by weather the affective and sensual potency of weather and the diverse cultural forms and practices that exemplify how weather is historically geographically and artistically represented Offering a social and cultural understanding of weather events this book contributes to a growing literature on weather across various disciplines including human geography and cultural geography and will thus appeal to students and scholars of geography sociology humanities cultural studies and the arts

Environmental Data Service,2000 The Remarkable Weather of Southern California Miguel Miller,2023-02-21 Yes even in Southern California weather is something we experience every day It is in our conscious or subconscious whenever we wake up look out a window venture outside see or feel the sunshine hear the swish of wind in the trees or the white noise of rain on the roof We make decisions sometimes several times a day based on a brief thought of weather We make plans based on the near term forecast or long term climate Occasionally we take prompt action to stay safe from it For something so integral to our lives how much of it do we understand Greater understanding of the real practical meaning of the forecast can inform decisions and plans affording greater confidence and less frustration You will gain a greater awareness of how the weather you experience works You ll understand where forecasts come from how they re made and what it means to you Santa Ana Wind Helen Van Slyke,1982-12-01 Anthropogenic Reduction of Santa Ana Winds Mimi Hughes,2009
