Gender Influences in Classroom Interaction Louise Cherry Wilkinson, Cora B. Marrett, 2013-10-22 Educational Psychology Series Gender Influences in Classroom Interaction compiles papers presented at a conference funded by the National Institute of Education and held at the Wisconsin Center for Education Research University of Wisconsin Madison in October 1983 This book focuses on the interactional influences that may be related to differential classroom experiences for females and males A diversity of issues that have a bearing on gender related influences such as contextual factors and teacher and student characteristics from both theoretical and empirical perspectives are also deliberated This compilation is addressed primarily to researchers but is also useful to teachers educational policy makers and others who want to insure every child regardless of gender or other status the opportunity of a rewarding and challenging education An Inquiry Concerning the Relative Influence of the Sex of the Fetus in Utero, on the Mental, Physical, Physiological, Pathological, and Developmental Condition of the Mother During Gestation, Lactation, and Subsequently John Stockton Hough, 1884

Gender Influences Donnalee Rubin, 1993 Donnalee Rubin examines the responses of thirty one freshman composition teachers to student writing and shows the negative effects of gender bias on assessment to prove that gender perceptions and expectations can influence assessment decisions that seem neutral on the surface Arguing that certain pedagogies are more likely to minimize gender bias than others Rubin believes that teachers are more likely to overcome the influence of gender bias on their teaching if they adopt a process based method and work intimately with their students through nondirective supportive conferences Rubin characterizes the conference process centered class as the type of environment in which maternal teaching can be cultivated She stresses that maternal can describe any teacher male or female who exhibits the nurturing and supportive qualities that the conference process approach embodies With a primary focus on the student s well being and development as a person and a writer the maternal teacher is in a better position to overcome gender bias that could distort the interpretation of student texts In order for writing instructors to increase their sensitivity to gender issues in assessment Rubin recommends that they self consciously engage in what she calls responsive reading Responsive reading occurs when the teacher reads with an eye toward providing the sorts of supportive feedback and dialectic exchange that will encourage student writers to think for themselves and to revise effectively Rubin argues that when teachers commit to a responsive reading pedagogy they are more likely to question their reactions to student writing along the lines of gender influence and to strive for self conscious awareness of how their own inner male female voices may distort their reading of student texts She challenges all writing teachers to become more aware of the inevitable challenge gender influence presents

From Sex Differences in Neuroscience to a Neuroscience of Sex Differences: New Directions and Perspectives Belinda Pletzer, 2015 This research topic aims to integrate scattered findings on sex differences in neuroscience into a broader theory of how the human brain is shaped by sex and sex hormones in order to cause the great variety of sex differences that are commonly observed. It can be assumed that these differences didn't occur arbitrarily but that they rather determined and still determine evolutionary success of individuals and were shaped by the processes of natural and in particular sexual selection. Therefore sex differences are not negligible and sex difference research cannot be discriminating against one sex or the other. In fact a better understanding of the underlying causes of sex differences has great advantages for both men and women and society as a whole not only in terms of health care but in every aspect of life. Gender equality can only work out if it is equally well understood for men and women what their individual resources and needs are. Therefore it is of great importance to pave the way for identifying the underlying principles of structural and functional brain organization that cause men and women to act, think and feel differently. To this end it is of particular interest to identify possible similarities and interrelations between sex differences that did so far stand separately in order to investigate whether they share a common source. To understand where a specific sex difference comes from and whether or not it is caused by the same principle as other sex differences it is necessary to explicitly link sex differences in behavior to their neuronal correlates and vice versa link sex differences in brain structure and function to their behavioral outcomes. In particular a new understanding of male and female brain functioning may arise from findings on how sex hormones interact with various neurotransmitter systems. In the past few years several findings demonstrated that women's behavior is influenced by the sex hormone fluctuations they experience naturally during their menstrual cycle to the extent that sex differences may only be detectable in one cycle phase but not another. The study of menstrual cycle dependent effects gives important hints about which sex differences are activational and which are organizational. Additionally it only recently came to attention that hormonal contraception may alter a woman's mood, cognition and behavior as a consequence of changes in brain structure and function. The underlying mechanisms are so poorly understood that it is even hard to predict whether hormonal contraception will mask or amplify sex differences in a given task. Since the oral hormonal contraceptive pill is meanwhile used by 100 million women worldwide and even by teenagers whose brains are not yet fully developed the question of how the synthetic steroids contained in hormonal contraceptives act on the brain is to be studied hand in hand with naturally occurring sex differences. This topic summarizes the current state of the art in sex difference research and gives new perspectives in terms of hypothesis generation and methodology. Both are necessary to gain a complete picture of what it is that makes a brain male or female and move towards a neuroscience of sex differences.

Chrisler, Donald R.

McCreary, 2010-03-12 Donald R McCreary and Joan C Chrisler The Development of Gender Studies in Psychology Studies of sex differences are as old as the field of psychology and they have been conducted in every sub field of the discipline There are probably many reasons for the popularity of these studies but three reasons seem to be most prominent First social psychological studies of person perception show that sex is especially salient in social groups It is the first thing people notice about others and it is one of the things we remember best Fiske Haslam Stangor Lynch Duan Glass 1992 For example people may not remember who uttered a witty remark but they are likely to remember whether the quip came from a woman or a man Second many people hold firm beliefs that aspects of physiology suit men and women for particular social roles Men's greater upper body strength makes them better candidates for manual labor and their greater height gives the impression that they would make good leaders i.e. people we look up to Women's reproductive capacity and the caretaking tasks e.g. breastfeeding baby minding that accompany it make them seem suitable for other roles that require gentleness and nurturance Third the logic that underlies hypothesis testing in the sciences is focused on difference Researchers design their studies with the hope that they can reject the null hypothesis that experimental groups do not differ Adolescence in Context Tara L. Kuther, 2020-06-03 From award winning author Tara L Kuther comes Adolescence in Context a topically oriented text that connects learners to the science that shapes our understanding of today's teenagers and young adults The book is organized around three core themes the centrality of context the importance of research and the applied value of developmental science The text presents classic research current research and foundational theories which Kuther frames in real life contexts such as gender race and ethnicity and socioeconomic status Students will come away with an understanding of the book s themes and material that they will immediately be able to apply to their own lives and future careers
