Warwick Rowe Tarboton, Rudy Erasmus, 1998 In seven chapters Tarboton and Erasmus present each of Southern Africa's owl species. The guide tells readers where and when to look and listen for owls, what tell-tale signs to look for, how to encourage them to your garden and where to find nests. It also discusses conservation issues regarding owls. Owls are introduced in their various aspects and the chapters are grouped according to habitat, for example city owls, bushveld owls and owls that live near water.

Bildstein, David Michael Bird, 2007 Think about how we know about past events in human history, e.g. the expansion of the Roman Empire or the American Revolution. What types of records document those events? Now think about Earth's history, specifically the past environmental or climatic conditions at times before recorded human history. What records might there be of such conditions? Make a list of your ideas. An assemblage of five major types of natural archives of Earth's environmental and climatic history. What common features do each of these paleoclimate archives share? An assemblage of 5 major types of natural records or archives of Earth's environmental and climatic history. Just like a diary or other historical document, the layers in these natural archives contain indirect evidence, i.e. proxies, about past conditions and events recorded in a sequential order. The evidence is specific to a certain time period and may be general or very detailed, depending on the rate at which information was recorded. The faster the rate at which the recorder grew trees and corals, accumulated snow and ice or deposited sedimentary sequences, the more detailed the record is and the higher its resolution. For example, a record in which an annual signal can be observed has a very high resolution. In contrast, if the finest observable details are on the order of a million years then that record would have a low resolution      The African Book
