Aksakal, 2026-01-13 A new history that tells the story of how European imperial ambitions destroyed the Ottoman Empire during the Great War and created a divided and unstable Middle East The Ottoman Empire's collapse at the end of the First World War is often treated as a foregone conclusion It was only a matter of time the story goes before the so called Sick Man of Europe succumbed to its ailments incompetent management nationalism and ethnic and religious conflict In The War That Made the Middle East Mustafa Aksakal overturns this conventional narrative He describes how European imperial ambitions and the Ottoman commitment to saving its empire at any cost including the destruction of the Armenian community and the deaths of more than a million Ottoman troops and other civilians led to the empire's violent partition and created a politically unstable Middle East The War That Made the Middle East shows that until 1914 the Ottoman Empire was a viable multiethnic multireligious state and that relations between the Arabs Jews Muslims and Christians of Palestine were relatively stable When war broke out the Ottoman government sought an alliance with the Entente but was rejected because of British and French designs on the Eastern Mediterranean After the Ottomans entered the fight on the side of Germany and were defeated Britain and France seized Ottoman lands and new national elites in former Ottoman territories claimed their own states The region was renamed the Middle East erasing a robust and modernizing 600 year old empire A sweeping narrative of war great power politics and ordinary people caught up in the devastation The War That Made the Middle East offers new insights about the Great War and its profound and lasting consequences Mothers and Daughters in Arab Women's Literature Dalya Abudi, 2010-11-11 This study explores the mother daughter relationship as the most fundamental and most intimate female relationship It draws on both early and contemporary writings of Arab women to illuminate the traditional and evolving nature of mother daughter relationships in Arab families and how these family dynamics reflect and influence modern Arab life
