It is well known that men and women of the Renaissance were ferociously prolific letter writers. Whether this epistolary mania was due to the revival of a classical literary habit perpetrated originally by Petrarch or the needs of a 'rebirth' psychology coupled with the alluring publicity potential of the printing press, the fact is that thousands of prose and verse epistles were written, exchanged, eagerly read, and widely published following upon the appearance of Aretino's in 1537. Given the importance of this cultural activity, it is surprising to read in the preface to this new collection that no anthology of letters in English and in translation has previously been available. While the letters of some of the big European names represented here—Erasmus, Aretino, Michelangelo, Fugger, to name a few—have been translated and published, it is true that we have not had for ourselves and our students a miscellaneous collection of this kind which offers a sampling of the whole range of Renaissance culture. There is something here for every specializing student of the Renaissance, and even a rare opportunity to see the period from something like a general perspective. The anthology will also appeal through its illustrations and simplified format to the general reader. For all this the editors are to be thanked and applauded, notwithstanding the inevitable complaints they will hear about inclusions and omissions that any anthology is bound to stir up.

From what was at one time a giddily optimistic intention to include six hundred pieces, the editors eventually settled for the reality of two hundred, either complete or carefully excerpted. Of these, some thirty have been translated for the first time by themselves. The collection has been grouped into ten chapters, averaging twenty letters each, prefaced by two familiar black-and-white portraits or other paintings of the time and a brief introduction to each chapter's theme. These themes range from 'Renaissance Humanism, the Gentleman-Scholar' (Chapter 1) to 'Daily Life, Domestic Concerns, Town vs. Country, Pastimes, Money' (Chapter x). In between these framing chapters one can find eight others with letters touching on the various social, political, economic, scientific, religious, or artistic concerns of the time. (Naturally, considering the scope implied by the chapter titles, one misses those other four hundred letters!) There is a short but comprehensive survey of the

A Guide to Neo-Latin

Literature Victoria Moul,2017-01-16 Latin was for many centuries the common literary language of Europe and Latin literature of immense range stylistic power and social and political significance was produced throughout Europe and beyond from the time of Petrarch c 1400 well into the eighteenth century This is the first available work devoted specifically to the enormous wealth and variety of neo Latin literature and offers both essential background to the understanding of this material and sixteen chapters by leading scholars which are devoted to individual forms Each contributor relates a wide range of fascinating but now little known texts to the handful of more familiar Latin works of the period such as Thomas More s Utopia Milton s Latin poetry and the works of Petrarch and Erasmus All Latin is translated throughout the volume

Gender and Position-Taking in Henrician Verse Rebecca Quoss-Moore,2025-10-01 Tradition translation and transcription in Henrician verse functioned together in systems of communally created coded position taking Understanding this system as an extensive network of production and reception in which women took on many roles allows for new readings of Henrician verse that emphasize the interpretive range available to contemporary reading and writing communities This restoration demasculinizes our approach to Henrician verse not only through a more equitable consideration of gender s functions in that social world but also in de-emphasizing individualized self-fashioning or authorial intent in favor of an engagement with communal production and shared sociopolitical engagement The creation in this system is not of a code but of systems for coding and recognizing position taking These communal systems offer a site for the intersection of reader and writer of transcriber and composer and of King and courtier in a space that questions creates and troubles power in the Henrician court
