Cliff Shelters and Hiding Complexes: The Jewish Defense Methods in Galilee During the Roman Period Yinon Shivti'el,2019-05-20 Cliff Shelters and Hiding Complexes in Galilee during the Early Roman Period is the result of years of intensive study conducted by Yinon Shivtiel throughout Galilee combining historical archaeological and speleological research The author documents and describes all the Galilean sites so far discovered containing the traces of underground cavities hewn out and readied by Jews as refuges and hiding places during the Early Roman period The study relies on accounts in two of Flavius Josephus works The Jewish War and The Life of Josephus where Josephus records that the Jewish population in Galilee prepared two types of underground chambers for use in times of adversity defined in the research as cliff shelters and hiding complexes During the author s comprehensive fieldwork which is thoroughly documented and described in the book it became clear that the first method exploited natural caves whose openings were located at the top of steep cliffs most of which could only be reached by rock climbing or rappelling with the aid of ropes The many finds from these shelters shed light on their extensive use during the Early Roman period Where no naturally fortified cliffs existed the Jews of Galilee resorted to quarrying out underground hiding complexes The book details the evidence and finds from the different forms of hiding complexes discovered beneath the remains of many of the Jewish settlements in Galilee chronicled by Flavius Josephus Research into these complexes has revealed their resemblance to similar hiding systems discovered in the Judean plain The book is copiously illustrated with plans figures and photographs of both types of underground chambers and it discusses their connection with the desperate times faced by the Jews in Galilee throughout the entire Early Roman period particularly during the Great Revolt

Mountaineering and Its Literature Jill Neate, 1980 Few areas of human endeavor and adventure have such an extensive literature as does mountaineering perhaps because the activity itself is so diverse ranging from gymnastic feats of modern rock climbers through alpinism to Himalayan conquests and exploration Even before Edward Whymper climbed the Matterhorn in 1865 and wrote the celebrated Scrambles in the Alps mountaineers had felt compelled to record their adventures and their sense of wonder at the mountain world In recent years the literature has expanded considerably to account for the phenomenal growth of mountain activities Expeditions are now commonplace and the great mountain ranges are no longer beyond the reach of the average climber This extensive bibliography describes works on mountaineering published in the English language since 1744 But it is far more than a dry catalog of books as author Neate gives notes which help the reader assess each book's reliability and significance An indispensable reference for the active climber would be explorer and bibliophile alike
