INTRODUCTION TO MANAGEMENT ACCOUNTING

WHAT IS 'ACCOUNTING'?

Accounting is the systematic and comprehensive recording of financial transactions pertaining to a business, and it also refers to the process of summarizing, analyzing and reporting these transactions to oversight agencies and tax collection entities. Accounting is one of the key functions for almost any business; it may be handled by a bookkeeper and accountant at small firms or by sizable finance departments with dozens of employees at large companies.

THREE BRANCHES OF ACCOUNTING

Before discussing what are the three branches of Accounting? let me tell you the definition. According to Wikipedia, Accounting usually generates financial statements which reveal in money terms the economic resources under the control of management, selecting information which is appropriate and representing it faithfully.

Today, it is referred to as "the language of business" since it is the vehicle for reporting financial information pertaining to a business entity to numerous different categories of people.

According to Wikipedia, branches of accounting are: Financial, Management, Cost, Tax, Forensic and Public Sector.

Following are the Main Three Branches of Accounting

1. Financial accounting: It is intended for outsiders (persons apart from owners and managers). There are several uses of Financial accountancy. It is worried about the recording of business transactions and the periodic preparation of income statement, balance sheet and cash flow statement from these types of records. In this way, it is perfect for determining profit or loss made during a given period and financial position by the end of the given period as well as the sources and uses of cash for the year. Financial accountancy is controlled by both local and international standards.
2. Management accounting: It is focused on the interpretation of accounting information to help the management in future planning, decision making, control, etc. Management accountancy, for that reason, serves the information requirements of the insiders, e.g., owners, managers and employees. Within the division of management accountancy you will find nearly enormous quantities of tools, methods, techniques and approaches floating around.
3. Cost accounting: It is a useful tool you utilize to cut back and eliminate costs in a business. This has been developed to determine the costs incurred for carrying out different business activities and to assist the management to exercise strict cost control. Considering that managers are making decisions just for their own firm, there's no need for the information to be comparable to similar information from other businesses.
