The Czech Tradition of Brass Instrument Manufacturing in the Latter Half of the 19th Century in the Light of Practical Manuals of the Period Tereza Žůrková, 2024-01-01 By their nature musical instruments are very complex objects that embody a combination of both artistic and physical properties Monitoring or interpreting their development in various historical periods must therefore be set into a broader historical and especially cultural context Knowledge about period technologies is increasingly seen as being of fundamental importance not only for understanding the development of instruments and of their manufacturing but also as a precondition for the modern production of faithful copies of historical instruments In answering this question we are faced with a lack of direct sources and findings can be deduced on the basis of surveying preserved specimens and other secondary sources For this reason the practical manuals by two Czech brass instrument makers V F erven On the Manufacturing of Metal Musical Instruments and J ediva Instructions for Making and Ordering Brass Instruments Infantry Signal Horns Cavalry Signal Bugles and Large and Small Drums can be classified as unique sources They give us a real picture of the practices of period craftsmen because they describe in relative detail the entire manufacturing process In both cases the manuals turned out to be quite unique not only for their focus and content but also in particular for the time when they were published at a time when craftsmanship was still largely being passed on by word of mouth and when a firm s competitiveness was ensured not only by its constant progress but especially by its own often secret production processes By publishing an edition of these practical manuals and setting them in a broader cultural and historical context this book s goal is to contribute something towards our knowledge of a topic that is of increasing interest to researchers performers and musical instrument makers

Environmentally Significant Behaviour in the Czech Republic: Energy, Food and Transportation Milan Ščasný, Jan Urban, Iva Zvěřinová, 2013-05-01 This book strives to present the results of research into the consumption of goods and services in Czech households. The first two chapters focus on the effect of consumption on the environment and theoretical approaches towards consumption and behaviour analysis. The remaining five chapters look into consumer behaviour and its significant effect on the environment such as a demand for energy and transport energy saving measures in households, car ownership and organic food consumption. This book aims to point out the environmental effects related to these types of behaviour and provide new information on the frequency of these types of consumer behaviour in various segments of the Czech society. This publication also accentuates the policies and other intervention tools that may be used to influence consumer behaviour.
