

The background is a vibrant, abstract composition of swirling, organic shapes in a wide range of colors including purple, blue, yellow, orange, red, and green. The patterns resemble liquid or smoke in motion. Scattered throughout the composition are small, glowing dots in various colors (white, yellow, blue, red) and some faint, thin lines, giving it a cosmic or digital feel. The text "Random Order generato" is centered in the middle of the image in a white, sans-serif font.

Judgments of the Relative Frequency of Two Random Sequential Events Dwight E. Erlick, 1960 The purpose of this investigation was to determine the effect that duration of observation has on one's ability to tell which of two random sequential events has occurred more frequently Using a rate of four events per second and observation durations ranging from 1.75 to 80 seconds two specific conditions were studied 1 the effect of having a constant observation period repeated so that subjects could anticipate the duration of each observation and 2 the effect of having a highly variable observation time such that the observer could not accurately anticipate when the time sample would end Using 75 per cent correct identification of the more frequent event as a threshold measure the results indicate for both presentation conditions that a smaller increment in frequency of one of the events over the other was needed as the observation duration increased An asymptote was reached as the ratio between the more frequent and the less frequent event approached 1.20 With a constant observation time the asymptote is reached between 10 and 20 seconds duration while with a variable observation time it is reached between 40 and 80 seconds Abstract
