Qualitative Methods and Health Policy Research Elizabeth Murphy, 2017-07-05 Qualitative researchers have traditionally been cautious about claiming that their work was scientific The right on schools have exaggerated this caution into an outright rejection of science as a model for their work Science is for them outmoded an archaic form of consciousness surviving for a while yet in a degraded form Tyler 1986 200 Scientists assertions that they are in pursuit of truth simply camouflage their own lust for power There is no essential difference between truth and propaganda The authors acknowledge that the boundary between science and propaganda has often been breached and some distrust of scientific claims may be healthy They also question the claim that science creates disinterested and objective knowledge of an observer independent world without concluding that science is impossible The skeptics reservations about qualitative research are based on the deep rooted assumption among natural scientists and some social scientists that there is a world out there prior to and independent of their observations This world can be known objectively in the sense that all observers will if identically placed see it in exactly the same way If a suitable language were available they would also all produce identical descriptions From these observations they can work out the laws governing the world s operations The authors try to resolve these contrary claims by asserting that science is a procedural commitment It consists of openness to refutation a conscientious and systematic search for contradictory evidence and a readiness to subject one s preconceptions to critical examination The devotion to truth as a regulative ideal is an essential difference between science and propaganda This work is a unique and innovative defense of scientific method

The Acute-Care Nurse Practitioner Judy Rashotte, 2013-12-01 From the moment it was first proposed the role of the nurse practitioner has been steeped in controversy In the fields of both nursing and medicine the idea that a nurse practitioner can to some degree serve as a replacement for the physician has sparked heated debates Perhaps for that reason despite the progress of the nurse practitioner movement NPs have been reluctant to speak about themselves and their work and their own vision of their role has thus remained largely invisible Current research is dominated by instrumental and economic modes of discourse and tends to focus on the clinical activities associated with the role Although information about demographics educational preparation position titles reporting relationships and costs of care contribute to our understanding what was missing was an exploration of the lived experience of the nurse practitioner as a means to deepen that understanding as well as our appreciation for their role The Acute Care Nurse Practitioner is based on in depth interviews with twenty six nurse practitioners working in acute care settings within tertiary care institutions all across Canada Employing a hermeneutic approach Rashotte explores the perspectives from which NPs view their reality as they undergo a transformational journey of becoming a journey that is directed both outward into the world and inward into the self We learn how in their struggle to engage in a meaningful practice that fulfills their goals as nurses their purpose was hindered or achieved In large part the story unfolds in the voices of the NPs themselves but their words are complemented by descriptive passages and excerpts of poetry that construct an animated and powerful commentary on their journey Poised between two worlds NPs make a significant contribution to the work of their colleagues and to the care of patients and families The Acute Care Nurse Practitioner offers an experiential alternative to conventional discourse surrounding this health care provider's role

Gender and the Social Construction of Illness Judith Lorber, Lisa Jean Moore, 2002-08-15 In this text the authors consider the interface between gender as a social institution on one hand and Western medicine as a social institution on the other and analyses issues of power and politics which pervade the study of both topics more adequately represent marginalized groups Partnership for Health Christina S. Beck, Sandra L. Ragan, Athena du Pre, Athena du Pre, 2013-11-05 In the 1960s feminists voiced their outrage about the health care system in the United States which routinely discriminated against women and in so doing literally jeopardized their health and well being Over a decade later women s health advocates still stressed the need for reform of this male dominated institution because of the on going threat to the health of American women In the 1990s nearly 40 years after women began their fight for quality and equitable treatment from the medical profession women unfortunately continue to confront problems on numerous levels including discrimination in medical research and in the availability of insurance and health care providers Most alarming however is the fact that women today like women in the 60s and before lack information understanding and adequate diagnoses and treatment from their health caregivers This book extends from a program of research on women s health issues by the authors More than 150 audio taped naturally occurring interactions between health caregivers and their female patients from three different health care settings as well as ethnographic field notes in three additional settings which provide health care to women constitute the data for this investigation They explore the consequentiality of relational issues during women s health care encounters and examine how health care participants save face enact roles co construct their encounters and accomplish the objective of education and medical care Unlike earlier works this study utilizes an extensive data collection derived directly from hundreds of interactions between health care providers and their patients as opposed to surveys or case studies of singular practitioners The authors examine the data in light of insights from a variety of theoretical perspectives and are committed to exploring the implication that medical encounters are collaboratively managed by both patients and caregivers Given these theoretical and empirical contributions the authors believe this book will advance present understanding in the areas of health and relational communication women s health care gender issues in communication conversation analysis discourse processes and institutional talk Pronouncing and Persevering Susan F. Hirsch, 1998-08-15 The title of Susan Hirsch s study of disputes involving Swahili Muslims in coastal Kenya reflects the image of gender relations most commonly associated with Islamic law Men need only pronounce divorce to resolve marital conflicts while embattled and embittered wives must persevere by silently enduring marital hardships But Hirsch s observations of Islamic courts uncover how Muslim women actively use legal processes to transform their domestic lives achieving victories on some fronts but reinforcing their image as subordinate to men through the speech they produce in court Pronouncing and Persevering focuses closely on the language used in disputes particularly how men and women narrate their claims and how their speech shapes and is shaped by gender hierarchy in postcolonial Swahili society Based on field research and court testimony Hirsch s book debunks the conventional view that women are powerless under Islamic law and challenges the dichotomies through which Islam and gender relations are currently understood Revisioning Women, Health and Healing Adele E. The Dynamic Consultation Marisa Cordella, 2004-01-01. This book introduces a unique model of medical discourse that identifies the forms of talk voices that doctors and patients use during the consultation and studies the dynamic interaction as it unfolds, particularly in follow-up visits. Natural recordings, semi-structured interviews, questionnaires and ethnographic observations provide the data for the research which was carried out in an Outpatient Clinic in Santiago, Chile. Using an interactional sociolinguistic approach, analysis of the data identifies doctor-patient communication as a micro-performance of broader socio-cultural realities in which social status, power, knowledge and personal beliefs and values all find expression in the consultative setting. Importantly, while both doctor and patient voices are shown to contribute to an essentially asymmetrical exchange, the study also identifies the holistic and empathic 'Fellow Human' voice which places doctors and patients on a more equal footing. In connection with this voice, the Spanish concept of simpatía is also discussed. While the model in this study was developed within a specific socio-cultural framework, it is hoped that it will be adapted and modified more widely and contribute to a better understanding between doctors and their patients.
