

The background of the book cover is a detailed landscape painting. It depicts a rugged coastline with steep, rocky cliffs in the foreground where waves are crashing. A wide, calm bay or fjord stretches into the distance, reflecting the sky. In the background, majestic mountains rise under a sky with soft, white clouds. A river or stream winds its way from the mountains down to the water's edge. The overall color palette is dominated by blues, greys, and earthy tones, with a warm glow on the right side of the image.

Earth As A Cradle For Life, The: The Origin, Evolution And Future Of The Environment Frank D Stacey, Jane Helen Hodgkinson, 2013-06-21 The Earth as a Cradle for Life aims to fill the gap between readers who have a strong and informed scientific interest in the environment but no access to the journal literature and their desire for a basic understanding of the environment It provides a comprehensive account and requires no advanced mathematical skills It will also satisfy a need for a textbook on fundamental science for students in tertiary environmental science courses that may otherwise neglect the underlying basis of their subject The Earth as a Cradle takes a step back from common perceptions of the environment and presents a new fundamental perspective It draws attention to observations that have been neglected or discounted for reasons the authors found invalid and which allow a more coherent account of the environment than is possible without them Misunderstandings about the environment are common even in the scientific community They arise in part from the multi disciplinary nature of the subject and the difficulty in keeping all relevant observations in mind and assessing their validity These misunderstandings are often consequences of the band wagon effect when an idea is reinforced by repeated quotation and becomes difficult to contradict even when it is in obvious conflict with observations This is especially so in a subject with strong media interest and conflicting commercial interests and Cradle sweeps these considerations aside and presents a new environmental scenario This book draws on several decades of research by the authors on fundamental Earth science and presents probing insights on environmental questions that are not widely recognized even in the professional community For this reason it will become a landmark in the environmental science and Earth science literature University of Michigan Official Publication University of Michigan, 1974 Each number is the catalogue of a specific school or college of the University Invitation to Oceanography Paul R. Canada,2016-01-01 Between 1867 and 2000 the Canadian government sent over 150 000 Aboriginal children to residential schools across the country Government officials and missionaries agreed that in order to civilize and Christianize Aboriginal children it was necessary to separate them from their parents and their home communities For children life in these schools was lonely and alien Discipline was harsh and daily life was highly regimented Aboriginal languages and cultures were denigrated and suppressed Education and technical training too often gave way to the drudgery of doing the chores necessary to make the schools self sustaining Child neglect was institutionalized and the lack of supervision created situations where students were prey to sexual and physical abusers Legal action by the schools former students led to the creation of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada in 2008 The product of over six years of research the Commission s final report outlines the history and legacy of the schools and charts a pathway towards reconciliation Canada s Residential Schools The History Part 1 Origins to 1939 places Canada s residential school system in the historical context of European campaigns to colonize and convert Indigenous people throughout the world In post Confederation Canada the government adopted what amounted to a policy of cultural genocide suppressing spiritual practices disrupting traditional economies and imposing new forms of government Residential schooling quickly became a central element in this policy The destructive intent of the schools was compounded by chronic underfunding and ongoing conflict between the federal government and the church missionary societies that had been given responsibility for their day to day operation A failure of leadership and resources meant that the schools failed to control the tuberculosis crisis that gripped the schools for much of this period Alarmed by high death rates Aboriginal parents often refused to send their children to the schools leading the government adopt ever more coercive attendance regulations While parents became subject to ever more punitive regulations the government did little to regulate discipline diet fire safety or sanitation at the schools By the period s end the government was presiding over a nation wide series of firetraps that had no clear educational goals and were economically dependent on the unpaid labour of underfed and often sickly children
