Violence: Evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa Rasmane Ouedraogo, Mr. David Stenzel, 2021-11-19 The COVID 19 pandemic and lockdowns have led to a rise in gender based violence In this paper we explore the economic consequences of violence against women in sub Saharan Africa using large demographic and health survey data collected pre pandemic Relying on a two stage least square method to address endogeneity we find that an increase in the share of women subject to violence by 1 percentage point can reduce economic activities as proxied by nightlights by up to 8 percent This economic cost results from a significant drop in female employment Our results also show that violence against women is more detrimental to economic development in countries without protective laws against domestic violence in natural resource rich countries in countries where women are deprived of decision making power and during economic downturns Beyond the moral imperative the findings highlight the importance of combating violence against women from an economic standpoint particularly by reinforcing laws against domestic violence and strengthening women s decision making power

Interventions against child abuse and violence against women Carol Hagemann-White, Liz Kelly, Thomas Meysen, 2019-10-28 This book offers insights and perspectives from a study of Cultural Encounters in Intervention Against Violence CEINAV in four EU countries Seeking a deeper understanding of the underpinnings of intervention practices in Germany Portugal Slovenia and the United Kingdom the team explored variations in institutional structures and traditions of law policing and social welfare Theories of structural inequality and ethics are discussed and translated into practice

Terror, Force, and States Rosemary H. T. O'Kane, 1996-01-01 The lessons drawn suggest that the Holocaust and modern genocide are not intrinsically related to modernity Terror regimes she argues operate not through the state but from behind a state facade within a secret society Economic crisis is given prominence in their explanation with the decisive explanatory factor argued to be the move from plans to substantive irrationality Indeed it is the economic rationality of modern society most particularly in respect to labour markets which acts as the barrier to terror s rule
