

2 Imagining Globalization: Power-Geometries of Time-Space

DOREEN MASSEY

There are, as we know, many ways of imagining globalization. They vary in terms of their empirical content, in terms of the structures of their conceptualization, in terms of the implicit or explicit periodizations which they envisage, and so forth. It is impossible, and probably undesirable, to legislate on one interpretation over others.

There are, however, certain aspects of this debate over meaning and interpretation which it does seem worth arguing about, and the purpose of this chapter is to take up one of them. For, it seems to me, there are certain ways of conceptualizing globalization, ways which are in very general currency in both academic and popular discourses, which are in need of critique on both intellectual and political grounds. They are conceptualizations which are careless about things that in other circumstances we would be scrupulous about, they have an unwitting innocence about positionality, and they lend credence to a particular kind of politics (in this case in the form of a particular kind of globalization) not by being explicit about it but by accepting it as an inevitability.

I want, then, to examine some ways of 'imagining globalization' and to explore their effects. This exploration, moreover, will weave itself around two core themes. The first is the importance always of being aware of power-relations. And this is meant both in the sense of the power-relations in the social spheres we are examining and in the sense of the power-relations embedded in the power-knowledge system which our conceptualizations are constructing. The second theme revolves about space-time (or time-space) and how we conceptualize it. One of the most constructive of interdisciplinary meetings in recent years has been between sociology/cultural studies and geography around the project, in a variety of ways, of spatializing social theory. My own view is that this project has already been enormously productive, that it could be even more so, and that its implications palabras a shawl woven with words that nurture As Gabriella Gutierrez y Muhs points out in her insightful introduction not only has Viramontes's work not yet received the broad critical engagement it richly deserves but there remains a monumental gap in the interpretations of Chicana literature that reach mainstream audiences Rebozos de Palabras addresses this void by focusing on how the Chicana image has evolved through Viramontes's body of work With a foreword by Sonia Saldívar-Hull this collection addresses Viramontes's entire oeuvre through newly produced articles by major literary critics and emerging scholars who engage Viramontes's writing from multiple perspectives Social Movements, the Poor and the New Politics of the Americas Håvard Haarstad, Mark Amen, Asuncion Lera St Clair, 2016-04-08 Håvard Haarstad is a postdoctoral research fellow at the Department of Geography University of Bergen He has worked extensively on the political economy of natural resource extraction and the role of social movements civil society and labor unions in politicizing extraction Mark Amen is graduate program director in the Department of Government and International Affairs at the University of South Florida Tampa and Deputy Editor of Globalizations His current research is on urban indebtedness and the global economy Asuncion Lera St Clair philosopher and sociologist is Research Director at the Centre for International Climate and Environmental Research in Oslo CICERO and Associated Senior Researcher with Chr Michelsens Institute CMI Her research focus is on the interface between climate change poverty and development with particular emphasis on justice ethics and knowledge productions processes The Spectral Within Elena Miltiadis, 2025-10-01 Latina was founded in 1932 by the Fascist Regime and is often described by its inhabitants through its absences as a place where there is nothing The book examines the role of absence in place making and delves into the lived experience of Latina Through the analytical lens of haunting this work explores its inhabitants' efforts to see their city as a meaningful social space as they navigate the city's multiple histories and the absent presence of the contested past Being Together in Place Søren C. Larsen, Jay T. Johnson, 2017-11-01 Being Together in Place explores the landscapes that convene Native and non-Native people into sustained and difficult negotiations over their radically different interests and concerns Grounded in three sites the Cheslatta Carrier traditional territory in British Columbia the Wakarusa Wetlands in northeastern Kansas and the Waitangi Treaty Grounds in Aotearoa New Zealand this book highlights the challenging tentative and provisional work of coexistence around such contested spaces as wetlands treaty grounds fishing spots recreation areas cemeteries heritage trails and traditional village sites At these sites activists learn how to articulate and defend their intrinsic and life-supportive ways of being particularly to those who are intent on damaging or destroying these places Using ethnographic research and a geographic perspective Søren C. Larsen and Jay T. Johnson show how the communities in these regions challenge the power relations that structure the ongoing post-colonial encounter in liberal democratic settler states Emerging from their conversations with activists was a distinctive sense that the places for which they cared had agency a call that pulled them into dialogue relationships and action with human and nonhuman others This being together in place they find speaks in a powerful way to the vitalities of coexistence where humans and nonhumans are working to decolonize their relationships where reciprocal guardianship is being stitched back together in new and unanticipated ways and where a new kind of place thinking is emerging on the borders of colonial power

Articulations of Capital John Pickles, Adrian Smith, 2016-01-19 Articulations of Capital offers an accessible grounded yet theoretically sophisticated account of the geographies of global production networks value chains and regional development in post socialist Eastern and Central Europe Proposes a new theorization of global value chains as part of a conjunctural economic geography Develops a set of conceptual and theoretical arguments concerning the regional embeddedness of global production Draws on longitudinal empirical research from over 20 years in the Bulgarian and Slovakian apparel industries Makes a major intervention into the debate over the economic geographies of European integration and EU enlargement
