Power Struggle An Autobiographical Confession:

Power Struggle Richard L. Rubenstein, 1974 In this extraordinarily honest and profoundly moving autobiography of one of America's foremost theologians Richard Rubenstein probes deeply into his own life history in order to examine the nature of religion and understand how the emotions give birth to religious ideology He uses his own life story to examine why people become clergymen and he concludes that they do because they want power an identification with an overwhelming power greater than anything on earth He quotes James Joyce's description of the priest in Portrait of the Artist No king or emperor on this earth has the power of the priest of God No angel or archangel in heaven no saint not even the Blessed Virgin herself has the power With great intensity Rubenstein probes his own personality to get at the roots of the feelings that led to this desire for power Rubenstein grew up in a family of non religious Jews during the Depression at a time when anti-Semitism was omnipresent He first decided to become a Unitarian minister then he switched to Reform Judaism and studied to be a Reform rabbi and then he became ultra orthodox imposing the most rigid controls of Jewish law on himself to keep in check the lawlessness he felt within his own soul But eventually Rubenstein found that he could no longer believe in the God who had sent millions of Jews to death in concentration camps Along with other prominent death of God theologians he has tried to construct a new religious life not out of the ashes of the old but out of the needs of the individual out of what he has learned about his own self in relation to his parents and his children his teachers and above all out of his relationships with women in two marriages one that failed disastrously and one that is now successful The story of his struggle spiritual and emotional makes a complex and richly moving book a confession in the great religious tradition and a major contribution to modern religious thought Publisher

Out of the Ashes Marc H. Ellis, 2002-10-20 As the world watches with horror the unfolding events in Palestine and Israel Marc Ellis a Jewish American scholar examines what he sees as a crisis point in Jewish identity In this book Ellis offers a vision of Judaism that testifies to an ethical life in our era based on the principles of justice and community upon which the Jewish faith was founded Only by addressing the way in which those original principles are being squandered by a militarised state of Israel and a complicit Jewish establishment in America he argues can there be hope for peace in the future Israel and Palestine Out of the Ashes is a deeply personal philosophical account of contemporary Jewish identity Looking beyond the legacy of the Holocaust and beyond the portrayal of Jews as either victims or persecutors Ellis forges a new vision of what it means to be Jewish today

(God) After Auschwitz Zachary Braiterman, 1998-12-13 The impact of technology enhanced mass death in the twentieth century argues Zachary Braiterman has profoundly affected the future shape of religious thought In his provocative book the author shows how key Jewish theologians faced the memory of Auschwitz by rejecting traditional theodicy abandoning any attempt to justify and vindicate the relationship between God and catastrophic suffering The author terms this rejection Antitheodicy the refusal to accept that relationship It finds voice in the writings of three particular theologians Richard Rubenstein Eliezer Berkovits and Emil Fackenheim This book is the first to bring postmodern philosophical and literary approaches into conversation with post Holocaust Jewish thought Drawing on the work of Mieke Bal Harold Bloom Jacques Derrida Umberto Eco Michel Foucault and others Braiterman assesses how Jewish intellectuals reinterpret Bible and Midrash to re create religious thought for the age after Auschwitz In this process he provides a model for reconstructing Jewish life and philosophy in the wake of the Holocaust His work contributes to the postmodern turn in contemporary Jewish studies and today's creative theology

Kaplan,2007-01-01 This ambitious book explores the relationship between time and history and shows how an appreciation of long term time helps to make sense of the past For the historian time is not an unproblematic given but as for the physicist or the philosopher a means to understanding the changing patterns of life on earth The book is devoted to a wide ranging analysis of the way different societies have conceived and interpreted time and it develops a theory of threefold roles of continuity gradual change and revolution that together form a braided history Linking the interpretative chapters are intriguing brief expositions on time travel time cycles time lines and time pieces showing readers the different ways in which human history has been located in time In its global approach the book is part of the new shift towards big history in which traditional period divisions are challenged in favour of looking again at the entire past of the world from start to end The approach is thematic The result is a view of world history in which outcomes are shown to be explicable once they happen but not necessarily predictable before they do This book will inform the work of historians of all periods and at all levels and contributes to the current reconsideration of traditional period divisions such as Modernity and Postmodernity which the author finds outmoded Fifty Key Thinkers on the Holocaust and Genocide Paul R.
