Kohir, Robust Subspace Estimation Using Low-Rank Optimization Omar Oreifej, Mubarak Shah, 2014-03-24 Various fundamental applications in computer vision and machine learning require finding the basis of a certain subspace Examples of such applications include face detection motion estimation and activity recognition An increasing interest has been recently placed on this area as a result of significant advances in the mathematics of matrix rank optimization Interestingly robust subspace estimation can be posed as a low rank optimization problem which can be solved efficiently using techniques such as the method of Augmented Lagrange Multiplier

In this book the authors discuss fundamental formulations and extensions for low rank optimization based subspace estimation and representation By minimizing the rank of the matrix containing observations drawn from images the authors demonstrate how to solve four fundamental computer vision problems including video denosing background subtraction motion estimation and activity recognition Real-Time Heterogeneous Video Transcoding for Low-Power Applications Tarek Elarabi,Ahmed Abdelgawad,Magdy Bayoumi,2014-04-09 This book introduces a novel transcoding algorithm for real time video applications designed to overcome inter operability problems between MPEG 2 to H 264 AVC The new algorithm achieves 92.8% reduction in the transcoding run time at a price of an acceptable Peak Signal to Noise Ratio PSNR degradation enabling readers to use it for real time video applications The algorithm described is evaluated through simulation and experimental results In addition the authors present a hardware implementation of the new algorithm using Field Programmable Gate Array FPGA and Application specific standard products ASIC Describes a novel transcoding algorithm for real time video applications designed to overcome inter operability problems between H 264 AVC to MPEG 2 Implements algorithm presented using Field Programmable Gate Array FPGA and Application specific Integrated Circuit ASIC Demonstrates the solution to real problems with verification through simulation and experimental results

Low-latency and Robust Peer-to-peer Video Streaming JeongHun Noh,2010 Peer to peer P2P systems have emerged as a promising and cost effective transport solution for streaming video to a group of users in the Internet In the P2P architecture users not only consume video but also forward it to other users Thus P2P systems scale better than client server systems as users bring resources to the system The challenge is to achieve low latency and robust video dissemination by overcoming a number of adversarial aspects and challenges peer dynamics heterogeneous uplink bandwidth of peers heterogeneous hardware and capabilities of peers and peer wise connection restrictions due to NATs firewalls This dissertation presents Stanford Peer to Peer Multicast SPPM a P2P video streaming system SPPM is designed to achieve low latency and robust streaming by constructing an overlay of multiple complementary trees and dynamically rearranging the position of peers by Active Overlay Management in a distributed fashion Next we extend SPPM for providing playback control to users by time shifted streaming To perform time shifted streaming peers store past portions of video and forward them to other users when requested thereby reducing server load To further alleviate server load we propose fast prefetching by which peers can disseminate content quickly Finally we present a way to accommodate mobile users Video transcoding is often required to adapt video for the mobile users We propose interleaved distributed transcoding IDT which allows a video stream to be transcoded at multiple peers that are more capable than mobile users IDT is shown not only to reduce computation required at a peer but also to achieve higher error resilience in case of peer failure or packet loss Next-Generation Video Coding and Streaming Benny Bing,2015-10-01 Reviews the new High Efficiency Video Coding HEVC standard and advancements in adaptive streaming technologies for use in broadband networks and the Internet This book describes next
